$3.1 Billion Civil Defense Expenditure Faces Nation

Senate-House Group Gets Cost Estimate From Wadsworth; U. S. Share Is 54%

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

It will cost about $3,100,000,000 during the next three years to prepare the Nation against enemy attack, a top civil defense official disclosed yesterday.

James J. Wadsworth, acting deputy director of the newly-created Civil Defense Administration, presented a financing plan to the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

Of the total estimated cost, the Federal Government's share would be about $1,670,000,000, or 54 percent, Wadsworth said.

He said the States and cities would be expected to spend about $1,430,000,000 raised from local sources.

Communal Raid Shelters

The major portion of the total—$2,250,000,000—would go for "communal-type" air-raid shelters, Wadsworth said.

"To do less," he said, "might well result in no shelters or in shelters completely inadequate to cope with the atom bomb."

Earlier Wadsworth read a message from Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board, which stressed the joint responsibility of local and Federal governments in meeting the "greatest challenge ever faced."

Federal planning must be long-range, Symington's statement said. "We cannot afford to make a good showing only in the first round or two. We must be in condition to follow through to the final bell—and win," it concluded.

Figure "Realistic"

Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Atomic Energy Committee later termed the 3.1 billions figure as a "realistic" one. He said the final figure would go much "higher" before the three-year period is out.

The Senator said also he thought Congress would approve such a Federal outlay.

As for the States' ability, or willingness, to spend 1.4 billions on civil defense, McMahon continued: "I can just hear them (local level officials) now."

Wadsworth gave this breakdown of what he called "atomic age" civil defense financing:

1. Communal shelters—$2,250,000,000, with the Federal Government paying half the bill.

2. Heavy equipment for fire-fighting, engineering, transportation and communications—200 million dollars, with State and Federal governments each paying half the amount.

Local personnel and administrative cost—200 million dollars to be

In Crime Probe

Lucas Blocks Warrants for 11 Witnesses

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday demanded Senate warrants to bring 11 reluctant witnesses before his crime probe committee.

But the proposal met quick objection from Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.). He won voice-vote backing of the Senate for a motion to refer Kefauver's proposal to the Judiciary Committee for study.

Kefauver promptly served notice that he will seek today a roll-call vote on a motion he filed to reconsider the vote by which the plan was sent to the Judiciary group. He said the 11 persons were key witnesses, and suggested that failure to force their appearance would lead others to dodge the committee.

Lucas said the warrants would be a new precedent, effects of which should be carefully studied by the lawyers of the Judiciary Committe.

But Kefauver cited the precedents running back to a Senate probe of John Brown's raid on Harpers Ferry for the special warrants.

He said warrants for wanted witnesses had also been issued by the Senate in the Teapot Dome oil investigation and in a Pennsylvania election probe in 1929.

M'Keldin Says Tide, Ice Peril Bay Bridge

Storm Damages Span; Survey Promised By Governor-Elect

BALTIMORE, Dec. 4 (AP).—Governor-elect Theodore R. McKeldin said today engineers have told him the big bridge Maryland is building across Chesapeake Bay may not stand up under the battering of tides and ice.

McKeldin said he had been told the winter storm a week ago Saturday and Sunday did a lot more damage to bridge supports and piers than had been reported.

"I was told," he said, "that not only was the superstructure damaged, but that there was considerable damage to the underwater structure.

"That could be a serious matter, indeed.

"When I become Governor, I propose to re-examine completely the bridge situation for my own information."

McKeldin said he also is concerned lest the Korean war situation make it impossible to get enough steel to finish the bridge.

He pointed out that bonds for the 41-million-dollar bridge would have to be paid off as they mature, even if it is not completed.

The first piece of superstructure for the Bay Bridge, from north of Annapolis to Kent Island, on the Eastern Shore, was put in place just before the storm. The bridge is scheduled for completion late in 1951.

Engineers estimated last week that from $500,000 to a million dollars worth of damage was done by the storm when it played havoc with construction rings.

One of the shallow water supports at the west end of the bridge was swept away. The causeway built out from the eastern shore was damaged by pounding waves.

McKeldin said "one of the finest engineers in the business" told him the damage would run above a million dollars.

McKeldin added:

"The causeway from the Eastern Shore, which was built for reasons of economy, to make the bridge bonds more attractive to purchasers, has been severely damaged, my informant said.

"I think we are making a mistake to risk the lives of the people of Maryland on economical bridges."

The J. E. Greiner Co., Baltimore engineering firm which drew up plans for the bridge, is preparing a report on the damage for the State Roads Commission.

Snyder Asks Heavier Tax In Profits Bill

House Opens Debate On Measure; Vote Scheduled Today; Recommittal Asked

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A gloomy forecast of stepped-up Government spending and more increases in taxes next year was presented to the Senate yesterday as the House opened debate on a stop-gap excess profits tax bill.

Treasury Secretary John Snyder told the Senate Finance Committee rising defense outlays may increase Federal expenditures by 50 percent in 1951. He said a "very substantial" further increase in taxes will be needed to pay the bill.

Snyder urged the Senate tax-makers to increase the excess profits tax bill already before the House another billion to provide the full four billion dollars President Truman said is needed at this time.

The House bill, variously estimated by its framers to produce between $3,400,000,000 and $4,600,000,000 meanwhile received its christening fire of debate and headed for a final vote today. Speaker Sam Rayburn assured Mr. Truman at the White House that it will be passed before nightfall.

GOP Drafts Substitute

Republicans, however, framed a complete substitute measure to be offered from the floor in a motion to recommit.

As approved by the House GOP policy committee, headed by Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) the GOP plan provides a milder excess profits tax coupled with a moderate boost in regular corporate rates, as follows:

A 75 percent tax on profits in excess of average earnings in the best three years, 1946 to 1949. The GOP plan allowed full credit for the 1946-49 earnings before applying the tax. (The House bill allows only 85 percent credit.)

An increase in regular corporate income rates from the present top of 45 percent to 50 percent. (The House bill is confined strictly to excess profits taxes.)

Martin told newsmen the combination plan would raise from 200 to 300 million dollars more than the pending profits tax bill.

Called "More Equitable"

"Our motion would reach all true war profits but would deal more equitably with business," he said.

Republicans apparently lack the votes to substitute the plan in the House but some members of the Senate Finance Committee have shown interest in the so-called "double barreled" tax approach.

Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (N.C.) led off for the Democrats as House debate on the single-shot profits tax got under way.

Doughton said the present Korea crisis may be "the greatest

The gunmen entered the Kennel Club, about 5 p. m. (EST), disarmed the guards, took the house money and forced the customers to drop their valuables in a pile. The club is 25 miles from Memphis, Tenn.

Serious Problems In Korea, Rest Of World Topics At Conference

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee talked about "the serious military situation . . . in Korea" and the world crisis in general for one hour and 35 minutes yesterday.

They later issued a joint statement which, in effect, confirmed Mr. Attlee's earlier remark that Russia's attempt to drive a wedge between the United States and Britain was "a wasted effort," and that "trouble always brings us together more closely than ever."

They said that the conference revealed the "common ground" on which the two governments base their foreign policy, and also a "determination" to arrive at "a mutual understanding" of the problems that face the two.

The meeting between the President and the Prime Minister and their advisers took place in the Cabinet Room at the White House.

Briefing by Gen. Bradley

Mr. Truman had called in Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, so that he could brief Attlee and his associates on the situation in Korea. Undoubtedly it was a picture far more ominous than the one Attlee brought over from London with him.

Actually, the British leader learned before he went to the White House that some of his earlier assumptions had been exploded by developments in Korea while he was flying across the Atlantic.

Attlee, leaving London, was thinking in terms of holding a line in Korea. The position of the United Nations forces was deteriorating so quickly, however, that there was doubt whether it would be possible to hold a line.

Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee will resume their discussion today, this time aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg. They will have luncheon in her dining room at 1 p. m., and then will talk until late afternoon.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said that about 20 would sit down to the luncheon. The Williamsburg can accommodate that many easily, which was one reason Mr. Truman decided to use her. The dining room in Blair House, temporary home of the First Family, can take care of no more than 14 or 16.

Ross said that the Williamsburg would not venture into the Potomac during the luncheon and conference, but would remain at the dock at the Washington Naval

Pressures Increasing

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The growing belief that wage and price controls are inevitable with the greatly expanded defense program was reinforced yesterday by two of the Nation's top economic officials.

One was Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, who was blunt in his prediction that such regulations "will have to be imposed". The other was the director of the Economic Stabilization Agency, Alan Valentine, who, though less direct about it, nevertheless hinted pointedly at the shape of wage and price fixing to come.

Snyder's comments were made during testimony he gave before the Senate Finance Committe on future taxes. He was asked for an explanation of the Administration's policy on wage-price controls by Senator Millikin (R., Colo.). The Secretary replied:

"With the situation as it looks today, with increasing pressures upon us . . . with our expanding defense program, I think that to avoid inflation of a damaging nature these controls will have to be imposed."

Valentine, appearing before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on the subject of his confirmation to the top economic stabilization job, ducked all ques-

Memories of Victory Crop Up Along Sad Road Back to Seoul

By Don Huth and Bill Waugh

ON THE PYONGYANG-SEOUL ROAD, Dec. 4 (AP).—This road, for centuries the path of aggressors from Manchuria, is filled today with the men and vehicles of the biggest retreat in the Korean war.

United Nations forces, hurled from the northwest by Chinese Communist hordes, are withdrawing down this slender, dusty thread which links the former Communist capital of Pyongyang and the ancient Korean capital, Seoul.

Endless columns of tanks, trucks, heavy guns and jeeps are moving southward, bumper to bumper. Only six weeks ago these same vehicles thundered northward in pursuit of a shattered North Korean Red army.

Today this jumbled mass moved south through every type of road and weather hazard. Heavy trucks skidded on narrow, icy roadways flanked by deep ditches. Jeeps a few feet ahead became ghost-like apparitions in the thick dust clinging to the roadway. A light snow mixed with the dust, which windshield wipers swished into an opaque paste.

Stirred into this cocktail of weather along 165 miles of lowlands, foothills and mountains was a bitterly cold wind. The wind pierced layers of clothing like a rapier. It numbed hands and faces and dulled the senses.

Trucks of artillery battalions became scrambled with headquarters service units. Convoys jerked and halted to a stop, and continual traffic jams developed. Tanks attempted to dodge ahead of rumbling trucks. Disabled vehicles were left behind to make their way down the line as best they could, while the rest of the units pushed on.

This was not a rout. This jigsaw of men and material began dropping into place as units reached their designated areas. Harried military police working on the road with unit officers began funneling trucks into their proper assembly positions.

A light snow was falling Sunday morning when we left Pyongyang Airport on a trip that took 18 hours to complete—a 45-minute ride by air. Our open jeep passed hundreds of refugees along the road before we reached the city limits. They were all heading south.

Rubbled and battle-scarred buildings in the southeast outskirts of Pyongyang lined this main escape route southward. It was on this same road that North Korean soldiers streamed out of Pyongyang October 19 to surrender to the First Cavalry Division's

Attlee Is Told:

War Control In Korea Lost By U.N. Force

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Prime Minister Attlee learned soon after reaching Washington yesterday that the United Nations forces had lost control of the military situation in Korea.

The United States and its allies could no longer hope to hold any defense lines across the Korean peninsula; the United Nations had no appreciable reinforcements to throw in, and the enemy strength was overwhelming.

This was the bleak news Attlee heard when he talked with Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, after landing here yesterday morning. Congressional leaders had heard the same news the night before when they met for a hurriedly arranged briefing session at the White House.

From now on the outcome in Korea appears to depend only upon the Chinese Communist leaders and their partners in Moscow, and on the valor of United Nations rearguards.

If the Chinese Communists decide to stop at the thirty-eighth parallel, the former boundary between north and south Korea, it might still be possible to carry out a part of the U. N. program for an independent Korea.

But there is no real hope here that the Chinese will stop, in spite of discussions going on between the Indians and Chinese Communists at Peiping, New Delhi and Lake Success.

All indications are that the Chinese intend to drive southward, and through sheer force of numbers push the allies out of Korea altogether.

Although there is some talk of trying to hold a beachhead like the old toehold around Pusan, the only purpose of such a stand

Million Chinese Now Estimated As Committed in Korean Warfare

TOKYO (Tuesday) Dec. 5 (AP).—The Allies quit Pyongyang today as spearheads of a mighty 1,000,000-man Chinese Red Army threatened to outflank that onetime Korean Communist citadel.

It was quite possible the surging Red forces would recapture the former northern capital without firing a shot, reported Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert. He left Pyongyang at 1 a. m. Tuesday (11 a. m. Monday, EST) and flew to Seoul, the southern capital.

Observation planes reported today the Reds had occupied Pyongyang airfield on the city's northeast outskirts.

United States Eighth Army sources said at midday that Red guerillas may have entered Pyongyong but there were no confirmed reports that the Reds had occupied the city.

The last American and South Korean troops north of the city of 300,000 withdrew shortly before Monday midnight. Their way was lighted by several large fires as material of military value went up in flames.

Demolition squads touched off thunderous explosions as the troops moved south.

The main section of Pyongyang north of the Taedong River was left intact, however, just as it was found October 19-20 when the then-triumphant United Nations troops freed the Communist satellite capital.

The British Twenty-ninth Brigade covered the withdrawal of the Americans and South Koreans, then itself began moving south through Pyongyang's center across the ice-choked Taedong.

The British brigade started pulling out early Tuesday.

The Pyongyang airfield was abandoned shortly after midnight, reported Lambert.

He said total withdrawal of all Allied forces was to have been completed shortly thereafter.

Lambert said that despite the disappearance of Korean police and the municipal government, the people of Pyongyang were orderly.

Thousands of refugees, however, waded across the Taedong or clambered along the twisted and torn framework of destroyed bridges which had spanned the river.

Boy Takes Zoo's Python and Boa Home on Streetcar

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4 (U.P.)—A teen-age boy who loves snakes admitted today he stole a four-foot python and a three-foot boa from the Philadelphia Zoo and took them home under his lumber jacket on a crowded trolley car.

The boy, whose name was withheld, said he liked snakes and "wanted to add to my collection."

"I think he's learned his lesson," said Curator Roger Conant. "We won't prosecute him. He's only a boy."

About 20 other snakes also disappeared from the zoo's reptile house, but Conant said the boy did not take them.

The boy broke down and told his father about his acquisition of the snakes last night, and the father brought the boy to the zoo today to return the reptiles. Neitner snake is poisonous.

Conant said the boy told his father at first that someone had given him the python which he brought home October 21.

When the boy came in Saturday night with the brilliant emerald green boa, the father became suspicious and found out the truth.

"The boy literally had the 'joint eased,'" Conant said. "He had been there many times and knew exactly the movements of the keepers."

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 16, 1942

Dear Russell:

Sometimes I wish I could carry out your thought of more frequent talking on the air on my part but the one thing I dread is that my talks should be so frequent as to lose their effectiveness. And incidentally, I suppose you know that every time I talk over the air it means four or five days of long, overtime work in the preparation of what I say. Actually, I cannot afford to take this time away from more vital things.

There is apathy, though frankly I think it is lessening.

But you are dead right about the parades and the brass bands and the meetings and the waving of the flag. I am trying to get that started all over.

Honestly, the real trouble is not in the people or the leaders, but in a gang which unfortunately survives—made up mostly of those who were isolationists before December seventh and who are actuated today by various motives in their effort to instill disunity in the country. Some are publishers like Bertie McCormick and the Pattersons and the Roy Howard papers. The hearts of these people are not in unity and some of them still want a negotiated peace. Some of them are columnists or radio commentators who are actuated by the same motives. Some of them are politically minded and seek election gains. Some of them are antiracial and antireligious like the K.K.K. crowd and some are extreme nationalists like some of the wild Irish.

The best comment I have heard was by Elmer Davis after I spoke at the end of February. He said: "Some people want the United States to win so long as England loses. Some people want

Youth Being 'Short-Changed' On Education, Spock Says

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

America is "knowingly short-changing" its children in education, Dr. Benjamin Spock, famous child specialist, told 6000 delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth yesterday.

Dr. Spock, with Leonard W. Mayo, director of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, shared the platform in yesterday's morning session as the conference began its first full day of deliberations.

President Truman will address the conference at 10:15 a. m. today.

Dr. Spock had some specifics—good and bad—for the nearly 6000 assembled delegates:

"We are knowingly short-changing our children. Our schools are too few and too small. Much of the equipment is antiquated. Most classes throughout the country are shockingly large, so large that the best teachers are frustrated. There are too few teachers."

"America spends less for public education than for tobacco, for liquor, for cosmetics. We pay for what we want.

"It is obvious that we who are interested in good schools must do a better job educating the public in their value . . . There

Draft Figures 'Blacked Out' By Order of Hershey Deputies

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey has left to State directors of Selective Service the task of carrying out a Presidential order restricting the release of statistical information in the interest of national defense.

In the District and New York City, Draft Director Hershey's memorandum has been taken to mean a virtual blackout on release of draft-connected figures.

General Hershey himself last night said he did not know what material might be included in the "restrict" order.

"It poses for me," he said, "a problem of interpretation."

Presumably, draft officials said, there would be no blackout on the release of quota figures in the monthly draft call. General Hershey said that the State directors have been requested to submit questions about what figures may be affected.

The Hershey memorandum follows last week's request from the Bureau of the Budget that all Federal agencies submit to it "any proposals for publication" of statistics "which may involve questions of national security."

Budget Bureau Director Frederick J. Lawton said then that the action was taken at President Truman's request.

A draft spokesman said that the Budget Bureau request was "more

Rent Curb Extension Debated in Senate

Post Reporter

Congress yesterday received new appeals from Federal and District officials for continued rent control. They arrived as the Senate began debate on a two-month extension of Federal rent ceilings with leaders seeking a vote by Thursday.

As the Senate debate started, Administration spokesmen carried President Truman's request for a 90-day continuation of Federal controls into a hearing of the House Banking and Currency Committee. Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) called the committee to return today for an executive meetitng to act on the plan.

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell told a Senate District subcommittee that he favored the bill of District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) for a 28-day extension of the District rent law, now dated to end January 31, 1951. The new February 28 experiation date is the same as the one proposed in the Federal bill now in Senate debate.

New Need Seen for Curbs

Cogswell also told the committee that the expected influx of Government employes into Washington for jobs developing with the defense program would create anew a need to control all types of housing in the District.

The District subcommittee hearing will be resumed today at 10 a. m. to give opponents of the Neely bill their chance o testify.

Cogswell supported other key provisions of Neely's measure. These call for restoring controls to "conversion housing" here and to hotel facilities that were family apartments, and for rolling rents back to the level of last June. He cautioned, however, that additional personnel would be needed to re-apply rent ceilings to the "conversion" housing units not now controlled.

Others Back Bill

Others testifying for the Neely bill included Wendell Berge, former assistant United States Attorney General, who spoke for the Washington Americans for Democratic Action; Woolsey W. Hall, of the Federation of Civic Associations; C. F. Preller of the Washington AFL Central Labor Union; and Louis Pakiser, of the Washington area council of the American Veterans Committee; and John K. Hoskins, president of the Washington Housing Association.

In the House hearing, Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board declared the 90-day Federal rent bill was needed to help the mobilization program.

Symington said that rent control is "an essential part of a defense production and stabilization program." He said that the scheduled end of present controls on December 31 would come at about the time the first real effect of defense spending is felt.

"A Serious Mistake"

He said it would be a serious mistake to let existing control lapse "until we know better what types of production the new situation will require."

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods told the House committee that the ending of rent controls would aggravate difficulties in keeping employes in defense jobs. He said these problems now face employers in defense areas where there are housing shortages.

Additional needs for rent control in military areas were cited by Woods and by Lauren R. Reynolds, jr., Assistant Air Force Secretary, speaking for the Department of Defense. Reynolds said that rent increases in these areas would have "adverse effects" on military and civilian personnel and their families. He added:

Unless rental housing is available on a reasonable basis to essential defense workers, our military industrial requirements may be very seriously hampered."

Bricker Protests

In the Senate debate, Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) protested the two-month extension bill as "unnecessary." He also sharply criticized Woods as "one of the poorer bureaucrats" who has done "a poor job, an immoral job and at times an illegal job."

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) said that local option votes in the November 7 election showed that an overwhelming majority of people in his State want controls continued.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) who is in charge of the Senate bill on Federal rent control, said he hopes to get a vote on it by Wednesday. He indicated, however, that chances looked better for a vote on the measure Thursday.

The rent bill was brought up on a motion by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.). The motion displaced the move to bring up the Alaskan Statehood which has been the target of a filibuster maneuver since the Senate resumed work last week. Lucas made the formal motion to take up rent control after failing to get unanimous consent agreement to setting the Alaskan bill aside temporarily.

Wages and Prices To Be Linked

tions on his guess as to the timing of the application of controls.

But he did say, "We must look for and find very soon a general plateau . . . where wages and prices are generally in balance. I hope we are now near it.

"Once that point is reached, we must stabilize there and hold it."

What Valentine appeared to have in mind, it was believed, is the fact that a "fourth round" pattern of wage increases is now more or less established. It began late last spring with auto workers' contracts, spread widely through the electrical and machine industries and had the capstone set to it by last week's steel wage increase.

Unless wages are fixed now, on the basis of an increase of about that general amount, a new pattern of a "fifth round" will disrupt Valentine's "plateau" within a few months, as contracts expire and new negotiations begin.

Yesterday Senator Bricker asked Valentine, "Do you expect another round of wage increases before your office takes hold?"

"I definitely hope not," the official answered.

From informed officials it was indicated that Valentine plans to convene a labor-management conbuilt up a sufficient staff to arference just as soon as he has range the affair. At the meeting he would try to get agreement on formulae for arriving at price-wage ratios and dollar levels.

Valentine assured Senators questioning him that he understood Congress' intent that action on prices and wages be linked.

But, he warned, sometimes the two actions would not be simultaneous, and would not be rigidly parallel.

There may be cases, he said, in which his agency would feel compelled to act very quickly on a price ceiling, if some prices had suddenly begun to skyrocket, but where there would be need to delay and study the matter before applying a wage ceiling.

Similarly, he said, if it became necessary to roll back prices in a specified industry by a certain percent, it would not automatically follow that wages in that industry would be reduced by the same amount.

After Valentine's testimony, the Banking Committee voted unanimously to recommend to the Senate favorable action on his confirmation.

Today the committee will take up the question of confirming Michael V. DiSalle, the Mayor of Toledo, whom President Truman has named as Price Administrator in Valentine's agency. DiSalle will appear before the Senators but since he has not yet been on the job he will probably decline to give more than very general views about the price situation.

Must Make Nation Strong

Reed said Republicans "recognize the vital necessity of making our Nation militarily strong," but denied the bill meets the objectives claimed for it.

Across the Capitol, meanwhile, Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. Georgre (D., Ga.) predicted his committee will close hearings within the week and get a bill to the Senate in plenty of time for action this session.

Business witnesses before the House group almost unanimously opposed the excess-profits tax, favoring increases in regular corporation income tax rates instead. Beardsley Ruml, representing the Business Committee on Emergency Corporate Taxation, is slated to lead off for this viewpoint before the Senate Finance Committee today.

Estimate of Yield Low

In presenting the Treasury's case for the profits tax, Secretary Snyder estimated the House bill would produce only three billion dollars, far below what the House authors claimed for it.

Unless the Senate raises the take, he said the bill will not meet the objectives set by the President "before the recent deterioration in the international situation."

Snyder estimated next year's spending may be half again as large as this year, or around $67,500,000,000, but declined under questioning to speculate on the size and form of the 1951 tax bill. He said it should finance "the greatest possible amount of these costs by taxation."

Snyder testified that the events of the past few days have not only raised the sights on Government spending and taxes but that his estimate last month of a two billion dollar deficit for this fiscal year may now prove "too low."

He said enactment of the profits tax bill at this time will make possible a "partial reduction" in the deficit and deliver an "important contribution" to defense costs even though there is no present possibility of putting the Government on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Snyder argued that estimated 1950 corporate profits of 37 billion dollars, almost ten billion more than last year, would make it possible to collect the profits levy "without imposing hardship on corporations."

U. S. Hongkong Consul Told To Check 'War' Cargo to China

By the United Press

The United States consul at Hongkong was instructed yesterday to make sure the Isbrandtsen Steamship Co.'s vessel Flying Clipper carries no strategic American war materials when it leaves today for Communist China.

The State Department order came after Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) read a cable to senators which he said came from the ship's crew members. The Flying Clipper is bound from Hongkong to Tsingtao in Red China.

"Sail for Communist China December 5, carrying steel, tin plate, pipes," the telegram said. "Please take action if possible."

In New York, shipping company president Hans Isbrandtsen said his freighters "have instructions not to carry war materials."

"The vessels that are presently loading in the United States are observing the amended regulations as set forth by the Department of Commerce," he said in a statement.

"For those vessels that have sailed prior to the issuance of present regulations, we shall presumably receive instructions from the government if such are forthcoming."

American law forbids export of war-essential materials to Red China. The Isbrandtsen ship, however, is free to pick up such materials abroad and transship them to Communist China without violating regulations.

Doubt Voiced Russia Wants Full-Scale War

W. Averell Harriman, special presidential adviser on foreign affairs, said last night there is "no indication" Russia is ready to launch World War III.

"I'm convinced we can prevent a world conflagration," he told a Georgetown University audience, "but only if this country takes leadership" in unifying and rearming the free world.

The main question right now, he said, is whether the western democracies have time enough to achieve this purpose.

Harriman, a former United States Ambassador to Russia, said he sees no hope for a revolution within the USSR. But he noted the Russian people wasted "no love" on the Communist Party even after 30 years' indoctrination, and said the Western Allies should exploit any "brittleness" they can find among the Russians.

Harriman scolded advocates of preventive war and said such a war against Russia would be "folly." He said loose talk on this score might even scare Premier Joseph Stalin into aggressive action.

U.N. Assembly Asked To Rule on Red China

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
SIR BENEGAL N. RAU
... Confers with Wu Hsiu-chuan

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Big Three Western powers and three other Security Council members today asked the veto-free United Nations General Assembly to sit in judgment on Red China's intervention in Korea.

The move came in a telegram addressed to Secretary-General Trygve Lie by Britain, France, the United States, Norway, Cuba and Ecuador.

It called the step urgent and important. Warren Austin, chief United States delegate, said the next move is being delayed for instructions from Washington where President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee were talking.

'Wisdom and Courtesy to Wait'

"It is the part of wisdom and courtesy to wait for their decisions," Austin said. "It is also in the interests and protection of our boys over there that we delay, because we want to be sure that an overwhelming majority of the nations of the world is behind our position when we take the matter formally into the Assembly."

The instructions will cover submission of a memorandum promised by the six nations to explain the request for Assembly action. Austin said he expects the memorandum to be presented Tuesday. The Assembly's 14-nation steering committee then will consider putting the question on the Assembly program.

Russia vetoed last week a Security Council resolution, framed by the same six nations, calling for Red China to withdraw troops from Korea.

Vague peace hopes were stirred by weekend conferences between India's Sir Benegal N. Rau and Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, chief Chinese Communist spokesman. The hopes were kept alive when Lie invited the Chinese Communists, Rau, and representatives of four other countries to an informal dinner meeting at Lie's home tonight.

Nobody expected the discussion in the Lie living room to erupt into a love feast and a peace pact. But Lie—one of the original supporters for the Peiping government to supplant Nationalist China in the UN—made the move as a step to leave nothing undone that might result in a peaceful solution.

Besides Rau and the Chinese Communists, Lie invited Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, Israel's Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett, Pakistan's Foreign Minister Sir Mohammed Zafrullah Khan, and Sven Grafstrom of Sweden.

Virulence Disheartening

All the countries at the dinner party have recognized the Peiping regime and have voted to see them seated in the UN to supplant the Chinese Nationalists.

One Russian was invited as a member of the U. N. secretariat. He is Constantin Zinchenko, who is in charge of political and Security Council affairs of the U. N. It is in his department that the Chinese-Korean question falls.

Yugoslavia, Norway, The Netherlands, and the rest of the 17 U. N. members who have recognized Peiping were not invited.

The affair broke up at 10:40 p. m.

Britain's co-sponsorship of the move to censure the Chinese Red intervention in Korea, however, lessened chances for changing the mind of Wu or his government leaders by talks here.

The virulence of Wu's attacks on the West, so closely parallel to those of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky and Delegate Jacob A. Malik, are said to have dismayed and disheartened the British.

In the General Assembly, a Russian offer to deal U. N. membership to Italy, Austria and six other countries in return for the admission of five Soviet bloc states was narrowly rejected.

The vote was 18 in favor of the Soviet proposal and 22 against. There were 13 abstentions.

Italy Holds Defense Talks

ROME, Dec. 4 (AP).—Italy's supreme defense council met in a closed four-hour session tonight to study grave international developments. Details of the discussion were not disclosed. It had been indicated that the council would discuss action to speed Italy's rearmament and the integration of her defense with other Atlantic Pact powers.

Chinese Reds Demand Voice In Peace Treaty for Japan

London, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Communist China today charged the United States with using Japan as "a tool in aggression against the Asian peoples" and demanded a voice in preparing the Japanese peace treaty.

Foreign Minister Chou En Lai made the demand in a special statement on Japan authorized by the Red government and broadcast from Peiping.

"I solemnly declare that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government of the Chinese people, and that it must take part in preparing, drawing up and concluding the peace treaty with Japan," Chou said.

Communist China, Chou said, wanted an early peace treaty with Japan. But the United States, he asserted, had "adopted a policy of procrastination . . .

"Occupation troops should be withdrawn from Japan, according to the Potsdam proclamation," Chou said. "The United States has not shown the slightest expression from beginning to end that the American occupation forces have any intention of withdrawing from Japan at an early date, but instead have been using Japan as the war base to invade Korea and China.

"Just as the United States Government has today openly rearmed western Germany, it is now openly rearming Japan."

Premier Says Japan Opposes Rearmament

TOKYO, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Premier Shigeru Yoshida said today that he has no intention of rearming Japan and is not thinking of sending Japanese troops or volunteer forces to foreign countries.

Addressing the budget committee of the lower house of parliament, Yoshida said the Allied powers would not impose on Japan any peace treaty which runs contrary to the "no more war" principles of the Japanese constitution.

The premier was trying to calm fears roused in Japan by President Truman's statement at a press conference last week, when asked if Japanese troops would be used against the Chinese, that that bridge would be crossed when it was reached.

But at the same time, the Japanese-owned English language newspaper Nippon Times, which frequently reflects the opinions of the Japanese foreign office, would not "invite disaster" by abandoning Asia "to the Communists."

Rhee Vows Finish Fight Against Reds

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 4. (U.P.)—South Korean President Syngman Rhee pledged today "to fight to the last ditch," in exile if necessary, against the invading Chinese Communists.

Solemn and grim, Rhee told a press conference that "a line must be drawn soon or there will be no chance to halt this Communist aggression."

"The longer we drag the thing out, the more difficult the situation will become," Rhee said. "We will fight to the last ditch for the restoration of Korean soil."

Rhee said the situation was "serious but not desperate."

Asked if he advocated a major war against communism now, Rhee replied:

"As I do not wish to be branded a warmonger, I cannot answer that. However, I do not think the Communists will stop until they are stopped. I do not believe the situation in Korea will be settled until a solution between democracy and communism is reached—a solution in which either all democracies are engulfed into one Red world or all military conquerors are defeated as they were in the last two world wars."

Rhee evaded direct answers to questions about his opinion of President Truman's remark concerning consideration of use of the atom bomb in the Korean war.

He replied to a question, which he answered himself: "Who would get hurt? Korea." Then he added: "However, the military leaders and commanders of the U. N. know what not to do."

Rhee spoke strongly against any compromise settlement of the Korea question.

"The Communist have failed to live up to their promises made in international agreements, oral or written, in the past," he said. "If we effected a compromise, we would have no guarantee that they would keep their side of any such bargain.

Fire Wrecks Floats For New Orleans Fete

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 4 (AP).—Fire destroyed the floats and spangled costomes of the 1951 Rex Mardi Gras parade early today.

The blaze that leveled the Rex organization's Mardi Gras Den at Calliope and Magnolia streets did damage estimated at $100,000 and sent one fireman to a hospital.

A spokesman for the Rex organization said it would be impossible to rebuild the floats in time for the carnival parade February 6.

Stassen in Tokyo

French Order Families Out Of Hanoi Zone

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Families of all French civilians in Tonkin Province, scene of bloody fighting between French troops and Communist rbeels, have been ordered to evacuate, it was announced today.

No time limit has been set, but the order from the French high command said families in Hanoi, Tonkin's capital and principal city of the north; the port of Haiphong, and scattered through the Red River delta will begin preparations to leave at once.

The order came as no surprise. Most of the French already have sent their families home or have booked passage. Red-led Viet Minh legions have captured all the big frontier forts in Tonkin but Moncay and are poised for a drive on the delta. Civilians have long been evacuated from Moncay.

Military sources, however, said the order did not reflect any worsening of the military situation. They said it was a preventive measure to insure the safety of women and children, which could not be guaranteed if the Reds launched an offensive against Hanoi.

Fifth Communist rebel soldiers were killed in military operations over the weekend in Tonkin Province, French headquarters in Saigon reported.

Navy to Call 15,000 Enlisted Reservists

The Navy announced yesterday that 15,000 trained enlisted reservists will be recalled to active duty next spring to "substantially complete" present naval expansion plans.

An additional unspecified number of reservists—men in the grade of recruits and appprentice seamen with less than six months' active service—will be called up next July to replace trained reserves now serving involuntarily.

The Navy said about half of the new call in April, May and June will be for seamen and apprentice seamen with at least six months' prior active service. The other 7500 will be reserve petty officers in 32 specialties.

This call will "substantially complete the Navy's currently planned recalls of trained reserve personnel," a spokesman said. The service has set a quota of about 688,000 men by July 1, but this goal may be expanded under pressure of the Korean war situation.

Other defense developments:

1. The Navy will open a closed-door meeting with top-flight scientists here at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak today. A spokesman said that the meeting with its "advisory committee on "solid state physics" is part of a concentrated effort to gear basic research to the immediate needs of the defense program.

2. Congressional leaders quoted President Truman as saying he wants veterans of the Korean fighting to have the same GI educational benefits as did World War II veterans.

Under the Navy's April, May and June call for petty officer reservists, the following "ratings" will be included:

Chief; first class, second class and third class instrumentmen, telemen, radiomen, communications technicians, personnelmen, storekeepers, ship's servicemen, machinery repairmen, electrician's mates, interior communications electricians, builders and steelworkers.

First, second and third class boatswain's mates, quartermasters, gunner's mates, optical men, yeomen, disbursing clerks, commissarymen, musicians, machinist's mates, boilermen, pipe fitters, metal smiths, damage controlmen, pattern makers, molders, drivers and hospital corpsmen.

First and second class draftsmen, second and third class torpedomen's mates, third class journalists and dental technicians, and WAVES in communications technicians ratings only.

Evacuation Seen as Difficult; Few Suitable Ports Available

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Some hard military facts of the present situation in Korea—unalterable matters of terrain and logistics—make any immediate evacuation of United Nations forces from Korea unlikely, regardless of the political considerations involved.

The physical location of Korea's ports, the placement of the main mountain range, presence of mines in and around secondary harbors, abnormal tide conditions and the existence of large pockets of by-passed North Korea troops are undoubtedly having their effect on the top level political discussions now going on here.

For while pulling out of Korea quickly of course must be one of the alternatives considered in the admittedly grave situation we face, the difficulties in the way would seem to be an additional argument in favor of trying to establish a defensive position somewhere down the peninsula.

Whether it ultimately may have to be only another perimeter defense around Pusan—to cover an evacuation there — is something that cannot be answered yet. Almost certainly, however, U. N. will try to make a stand against the Chinese hordes, perhaps just north of the thrity-eighth parallel, perhaps below it.

Eighth Army in Good Shape

There's no cause for talk of a "Dunkirk" at this time, military men agree, at least for the bulk of MacArthur's Army. The Eighth Army, still in good fighting shape, is withdrawing in the west below Pyongyang.

Across the mountain divide, the smaller Tenth Corps is in worse shape, and an evacuation by sea there seems somewhat likely.

Korea's rugged north-south mountain range, plus the presence of by-passed North Korean Reds, almost certainly means that were any immediate pull-out by sea planned, the Tenth Corps would have to leave from the East Coast and the Eighth Army from the West Coast.

There still are some reasonably good ports available in the northeast if the Marines, Seventh Division and Republic of Korean troops have to leave by ship. The Marines would have to fight their way to Hamhung and its port city Hungnam, threatened by North Korean advances. The others at present have an exit through Songin or several smaller ports.

One complicating factor is the presence of mines around many of the smaller harbors. The Navy, naturally, is not saying which ports and bays have been swept safe for navigation and which are not.

U. N. Troops Not Routed

Mines, particularly outlawed floating ones, would be a problem in any "Dunkirk"—that is, any attempt to take troops of a routed army off open beaches by small boats or planes. Of course, the U. N. forces are still largely intact fighting forces, not routed at all.

Latest reports also place the Third United States Division also on the east coast near Wonsan—a good port though threatened by Communist guerillas. There were no clear indications as to whether they are heading south along the coastal roads, attempting to cross the mountains, are holding Wonsan or what.

Below Wonsan, there are only a few secondary ports short of Pusan. On the west coast, it appears that the Eighth Army has withdrawn too far to use Chinnampo—the port city of Pyongyang—if leaders were thinking of a sea evacuation. Below Chinnampo there is Inchon and no other port of any consequence short of Mokpo at the southwest tip of the peninsula.

We have been using Inchon as a supply point, but the great tide change there which permits ships to go in and out for only a few hours each day makes it a not-too-good evacuation point. Regardless, then, of the broad scale political and military considerations affecting the vital decisions in the making here, this dearth of good ports and other physical factors makes a withdrawal along the Seoul-Taegu-Pusan route the most likely course. Where or when we may draw up for a stand is not known. There are too many imponderables, including how many troops the Chinese pour in, to tell.

But the route south to Pusan is open, with railroads running, though threatened by guerrilla activity. We can go that way if we have to, and it looks like we will.

Wounded GI Killed Upon Return to tSates

ONEIDA, N. Y., Dec. 4 (U.P.)—Sergt. John F. Van Slyke, 19-year-old Korean war veteran who was wounded and returned to the States, was killed yesterday when his automobile was hit by a New York Central passenger train at the main crossing here.

or less rewritten" and sent by Hershey to the State directors.

The State directors yesterday began calling national Selective Service headquarters here to get interpretations.

Frank D. Norton, deputy director for the District, said that beyond the quota figures "there's not much more we can give out."

The interpretation, he continued, was the "only one possible" under the Hershey memo.

"You get the National call (figures) from Selective Service and the Pentagon. When we get it, you can have the District's quota."

"One figure that will be classified 'hereafter'," said Norton, "is the ratio of rejected draftees to the local quota."

General Hershey, asked specifically whether this ratio would be considered restricted, replied he did not know.

Interest in this statistic has been high in the Washington area because of figures showing that an unusually large number of area selectees has been rejected because of failure to pass the mental test. Reexamination of some of these men has been ordered.

In New York City, Col. Candler Cobb announced that the issuance of induction figures "and other information" would be curbed. Cobb, New York City's director of Selective Service, said he had spoken with a "high authority" in Washington before announcing his interpretation.

"I realize," Hershey said, "that a lot of things are not clarified . . . It depends a little on the State men themselves . . . I have no idea what was in the mind of the man who issued the (Budget Bureau) order in the first place."

In announcing the Presidential request for a clamp on statistics, Budget Director Lawton said President Truman asked him to:

1. "Maintain a surveillance of the publication of statistics and to restrict publication whenever, in any instance, release of the information might endanger the National Security.

2. "Insure that statistical information ordinarily released to the public, but withheld from general publication because of security considerations, will be released to authorized users in such manner as he (Lawton) may prescribe."

Collins Flies on to Korea After Talk With MacArthur

TOKYO, Dec. 4 (U.P.)—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, United States Army Chief of Staff, arrived today from the United States, conferred briefly wtih Gen. Douglas MacArthur and flew on to Korea to talk with field commanders.

Collins sought information on how and where the Chinese could be stopped, and how a large part of the United States Army which is in Korea could be saved.

The Army clamped a blackout on Collins' movements and conferences. But his presence in Korea was an open secret since even the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes published word here that he was visiting Korea.

Collins flew to Korea in MacArthur's new Constellation, the SCAP. A spokesman here said he was expected to see Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army, and Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps.

Reliable sources reported that when Collins arrived, MacArthur told him that the American forces in Korea are in serious trouble, being outnumbered overwhelmingly by the Chinese.

Informants said Collins was carrying to the field commanders assurances from President Truman and the Defense Department that everything possible would be done to assist them.

Whether the assurance meant the use of the atom bomb was not clear. However, Air Force experts here believed it was too late to use the atom bomb. They also doubted that it would do any good to bomb Manchuria. The Chinese Communists, they observed, seem to have all the men and supplies they need in North Korea already.

Ceiling of Stars To Rival Center's Christmas Tree

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP).—The towering Christmas tree that is raised every yuletide at Rockefeller Center will have a new rival overhead "star" display.

In cooperation with the Hayden Planetarium, the Center is creating a "ceiling of stars" intended to duplicate in every major respect the heavens of 9 p. m. (EST) Christmas eve.

Several major constellations and the Milky Way will be depicted on a network hung over the promenade between the French and British buildings from Fifth Avenue to the sunken skating rink at the rear of the structures.

The tree itself will be an 85-foot, 10-ton Norway spruce—No. 18 in the Center's annual series. It will come from nearby Mount Kisco, N. Y.

MacArthur Criticism Blunted by Britain

LONDON, Dec. 4 (NYHT).—Growing unofficial criticism in Britain of General MacArthur was countered in the Commons today by a Labor government spokesman who said the general's actions in Korea were in accordance with directives issued by the United Nations.

In giving this assurance to Deputy Conservative Leader Anthony Eden, Ernest Davies, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, in effect placed the government squarely behind MacArthur. The assurance also represents a government reply to its own restive left wing.

MacArthur Criticism

The issue of MacArthur's popularity has become paramount in view of Prime Minister Clement Attlee's journey to Washington. Criticism has slowly been transferred here into attacks on America's over-all policy in Asia.

The issue arose in the Commons today as a result of a speech delivered yesterday by Minister of Defense Emanuel Shinwell. He was quoted as saying General MacArthur "went beyond the objectives which we understood to be the objectives at the beginning of the affair."

Shinwell was sharply reprimanded today by London Conservative newspapers. The question was asked: Does the government speak with two voices? It was recalled that only last Wednesday Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said: "The objectives of General MacArthur are no more and no less than the objectives of the United Nations."

Davies, in reply to questions from both sides of the House, said today: "The directives under which General MacArthur is operating in Korea are those which have been laid down by the United Nations and the action he took in the first instance were under the Security Council resolutions of July 7. On October 7 a resolution was passed by the General Assembly and subsequently he has been acting in accordance with that resolution."

Dissatisfaction Mounts

The government's official attitude toward MacArthur, however, cannot screen the dissatisfaction here with the general's policies, rightly or wrongly. MacArthur represents in Britain the primary force which has brought the British people near to war with Communist China.

A number of British correspondents in the United States have been including in their dispatches veiled criticism of the general. He is represented as a publicity-seeker and so forth.

The sober London Times, for example, pointed out in a dispatch from Washington this morning that "since Thursday General MacArthur has written the first leader in this week's Life magazin, Arthur Krock's column in the New York Times, the main article in the United States News and World Report, a special piece sent to Hugh Baillie, president of the United Press, and a series of 19 answers—some of them long—to questions addressed to him in Tokyo."

Gun Factory. He said, also, the reporters would not be allowed in the Navy Yard.

Attlee Avoids Reporters

Attlee, at the conclusion of yesterday's conference, went out by a side gate of the White House grounds. Apparently, he was tired after his ocean flight, and wanted to avoid the army of reporters that was waiting for him in the White House Executive Office.

The conference began at 4 p. m. and ended at 5:35 p. m. About a half hour later, the White House issued a communique which had been approved by both the President and the Prime Minister. After explaining how General Bradley had summarized the situation in Korea, the statement said:

"Mr. Attlee and the President then reviewed the general world situation in the light of developments in the Far East. The relationship between these developments and the responsibilities of the two nations in Europe and the rest of the world were emphasized.

"The frank discussion which followed revealed the determination of Mr. Attlee and Mr. Truman to arrive at a mutual understanding of the serious problems faced by both the United Kingdom and the United States, as well as by other members of the United Nations. The common ground on which the two governments base their foreign policy was fully revealed."

Representing the United States at the conference table, besides Mr. Truman, were Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Marshall, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, General Bradley, W. Averell Harriman, Special Assistant to the President; W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board; Ambassador-at-large Philip Jessup, Walter S. Gifford, Ambassador-designate to Great Britain; Assistant Secretary of State George W. Perkins, and Assistnat secretary of State Dean Rusk.

With the Prime Minister were Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador; Field Marshall Sir William Slim, Chief of the Imperial General Staff; Lord Tedder, Marshal of the Royal Air Force; Sir Roger Makins, of the British Foreign Office, and Denis Rickett, private secretary to Mr. Attlee.

The weather was raw and gloomy when the British leader arrived at the Washington National Airport at 9:41 o'clock yesterday morning. His airplane—an American-made Boeing stratocruiser, flown by the British Overseas Airways Corporation—had a name painted on her fuselage: "Cathay," ancient name of China.

President Truman, who had been waiting at the airfield for 20 minutes, gave the Prime Minister a hearty greeting. He then shook hands with the members of his entourage, while Attlee was greeting Secretary Acheson, Secretary Marshall and the other Americans.

Issues Statement

The Prime Minister gave reporters the following statement before he left the airport for the British Embassy:

"I am very glad to come to Washington at this critical time to confer with President Truman.

"For many years past, Great Britain and the United States have been agreed on the broad objectives of their international policy—the maintenance of peace, resistance to aggression, the improvement of living standards in all countries, the upholding of the democratic way of life.

"These objectives are again imperiled and we must take counsel together on how we can stand firm in their defense.

"Trouble always brings us together more closely than ever.

"The latest propaganda attempt of the Cominform is to drive a wedge between our two peoples.

"They are wasting their effort. And never more so than at this time when we are waging together, under the United Nations, the struggle in Korea, in which the United States is carrying so heavy a share of the burden, but where we and other members of the British Commonwealth are playing our part."

Attlee Hears Allies Have Lost Control of Korea Situation

against a million Chinese could be to cover an evacuation.

The ultimate prospect, then, that faced the President and Prime Minister yesterday was a Far Eastern Dunkirk, with the hope that the largest possible part of the allied force could be saved to fight another day.

Stand Firm Elsewhere

In the face of such a possible disaster, there is every evidence that the Administration here intends to stand firm elsewhere in Asia, and to redouble its efforts to rearm and defend western Europe.

There is no idea of withdrawing the Seventh Fleet from Formosa except to help in saving the United Nations army in Korea.

There is no thought here of slackening in the American shipments of war material to the hard-pressed French in Indo-China, although the Chinese Communists announced last week that they would regard such help as a threat to their own security.

An enforced withdrawal from Korea would, of course, be a staggering blow to U. N. and American prestige, and no responsible source pretended yesterday to minimize it.

To Retrieve Lost Prestige

But the Administration here is planning already to retrieve lost prestige, and to do it by showing that it means to go the limit in creating defensive strength in western Europe.

Prime Minister Attlee will be told—if he has not been told already—that, far from turning its attention to Asia, the United States believes a strong Europe is more than ever necessary to its own survival.

The rush of disaster in Korea, faster than the engines of Attlee's plane, has swept away some of the disagreements that might otherwise have cropped up between the Prime Minister and the President.

Ideas of a buffer zone, or of assurances to the Chinese, or of a negotiated settlement about Korea, have been blown out of the way by the armed typhoon that swept down out of Manchuria.

British and American sources now see no basic disagreement between the two governments, although on many subjects, Far Eastern and otherwise, British and European publics will want reassurances about the steadiness of American policy.

Tennessee U. Bars 5 Negroes Despite Rulings by Court

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 4 (U.P.).—The University of Tennessee defied the United States Supreme Court and the State Attorney General today by rejecting five Negroes who applied for advanced study.

The 18 trustees of the Knoxville institution held themselves bound by the Tennessee constitutional provision "that there shall be segregation in the education of the races in schools and colleges of this State."

Counsel for four of the Negroes indicated they would sue for admission, backed by United States Supreme Court rulings opening white classes to Negroes where equal separate facilities are not provided.

Roy Beeler, Attorney General of Tennessee, had advised the university that it could not legally bar the Negroes. Commenting today, he said that the Fourteenth Federal Amendment, guaranteeing equal protection and equal rights of the races, superseded the old Tennessee segregation statutes.

Convoy Speeds Toward Seoul

Fifth Regiment as it fought its way into the Communist capital.

Our jeep pulled into the first convoy barely a mile outside the city. Bumper clanged with bumper as the convoy jolted its way over ice-covered roads. Already in ditches were loaded American trucks and trailers which overturned as they slid off the road. They mixed with the rusty, battered, snow-covered wreckage of Communist vehicles, destroyed in the American sweep northward.

Less than three miles down the road the convoy ground to a halt. Already the convoy was beginning to break into a jigsaw.

As the jeep rolled to a stop a heavy truck carrying Turkish troops bore down from the rear. An American officer flagged it down. The officer's orders were not understood, but his motions were, and the protesting Turkish driver pulled back into the column.

Through Mountain Pass

The convoy rolled on through the first of several treacherous mountain passes.

The town of Hukkyo appeared on the southern slope of the pass. Four Russian-made tanks stood as twisted, grim sentinels just outside the city. American forces had destroyed them the morning they began their successful attack toward pyongyang.

The dust became so heavy it almost brought an unpleasant end to our journey. The convoy stopped after moving at a fairly good clip. Out of the dust to our rear came a speeding truck. It bore down on us, despite the frantic waving.

At the last moment the driver swerved, barely smashing in one corner of the jeep. The driver crawled out. He was one of the Turks, who could only say, "no brakes."

There were only a few children to shout the familiar "Banzai" as the convoy rolled onward. It was between Hwangju and Sariwon to the south that the American Cavalry's Seventh Regiment and the British Twenty-ninth Commonwealth Brigade had closed a gap which netted 1200 prisoners in a single action.

Soldiers Seek News

Sariwon's rubble was reminded of the destructive power of a great air force. But the city seemed to strike back at our convoy by heaving black dust that looked like it was dumped from a coal bin. It was so blinding that one not driving had to stand and direct the driver in and out of the convoy.

From here on much of the trip was up one mountain ridge, across a small valley, and then up another ridge. The convoy stopped frequently. Soldiers immediately began breaking out C rations and started roadside fires. Korean children appeared as if by magic to pick up the leavings.

Soldiers who spotted the press jeep almost without exception would ask: "Have you got any news?" Many of them had spent days and nights in front-line foxholes.

Across Thirty-eighth Parallel

Kumchon, just north of the thirty-eighth parallel, was the last North Korean city the convoy moved through. Kumchon was the key to the beginning of the U. N. drive across the thirty-eighth parallel. Its capture by the First Cavalry Division in a three-pronged drive disclosed at first hand how thorough was the Communist propaganda. A majority of the houses have prominently displayed pictures of Stalin and the Korean Communist leader, Kim Il Sung.

In the darkness we rolled across the parallel into Kaesong. The trucks inched their way through the dark city as MP's feverishly worked to unscramble the jumble of convoys. Vehicles of all types lined the roadways and reshuffled into their respective units.

The MP's halted our jeep only momentarily and then waved us on to Seoul. During the first few miles the road was blocked by trucks turning around. They had pushed too far.

Train Goes North

Suddenly the road became as barren as it had been crowded. Our vehicle was the only one powered with gasoline along the highway. In the distance a darkened train rolled slowly northward, a sliver of light shining from its nearly blacked-out headlight. The wail of its whistle, echoing over the steady beat of the jeep engine, sounded as lonely as we felt.

The Second Division field command post was behind the rubble of what had once been a village. We stopped to warm ourselves by a fire where soldiers drank coffee from empty ration cans. The lieutenant offered a can of coffee and apologized for it. He explained that they had arrived late and found no accommodations. They were planning to spend their night at the fire.

The spirit of these men was as warming as the fire at which they stood. Several had been in combat for days, lucky if they had one meal a day. Then came the orders to retreat. They piled in the trucks and began the tortuous trip to the rear.

"We got the hell kicked out of us, but we gave them a helluva licking too. Just give us time and we'll be back there," one said.

The road of retreat is a long and bitter one. It is pockmarked with delay and confusion enough to break the morale of many men. But the army it carries south down this long route is ready to roll again—this time northward.

Last Plane Out

Reds Miss Chance at Pyongyang

By Homer Bigart

SEOUL (Tuesday), Dec. 5 (NYHT).—Pyongyang was abandoned early today to the Chinese Communist forces, which have outwitted and outmaneuvered the United Nations command. Even defense of the city had been ruled out by the threat of a Red development of the bulk of the United States Eighth Army before it could retire below the thirty-eighth parallel.

This correspondent left the former North Korean Communist capital at 1:15 a. m. today on the last plane to leave there, a cargo plane of the Far East Air Forces Combat Cargo Command.

At that time, all American troops had put back across the Taedong River, which divides Pyongyang in half. The British Commonwealth 29th Brigade, serving as a rear guard, had already begun to evacuate a thin perimeter defending the northern approaches to two military bridges over the Taedong.

Had the Chinese attacked yesterday, Pyongyang might have proved a fearful death trap for the U. N. forces, for virtually all the retreating columns had to funnel through the bottleneck there. But the Chinese evidently were taking time to reorganize. There was very little contact and the thinning Eighth Army line was able to disengage and retire with few losses.

Early this morning, Pyongyang was quiet and no sounds of battle came from the British outpost line three miles north of the airport. The last convoy was lined up for the long journey south and it was expected that the rearmost vehicles would clear the city soon after dawn.

Keeping the "death watch" on Pyongyang with the British was the United States Fourteenth Engineer Combat Battalion, which had the task of blowing up the bridges.

Fortunately, the withdrawal progressed so smoothly that an engineer team was able to blow up one of the two metal treadway bridges soon after midnight. The new railway span was demolished yesterday so that only one bridge was left, and it was slated to go after the last of the 52-ton British Centurion tanks had rumbled across.

Frank Noel, AP Camera Ace, Captured by Chinese Reds

By Stan Swinton

TOKYO, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Chinese Communists have captured Pulitzer Prize Winner Frank Noel, the laughing man with the private first class stripe pasted on his battered Speed Graphic.

Noel

They captured Frank because his heart was too big.

The ace Associated Press photographer and I were to have flown back to Tokyo together for a rest. The night before Frank said:

"Old Pappy is going to stay here. I feel better up with the kids at the front."

Stay with the Kids

He knew the kids up front felt better when he was around.

It happened Friday night near Koto, six miles south of the Changjin Reservoir in northeast Korea. Marine Capt. Michael Capraro, a public information officer, saw Noel captured.

A convoy was trying to break through to a cut-off Marine regiment. The convoy, carrying supplies and reinforcements, was ambushed several miles south of Koto.

Capraro was with Noel when the column was attacked. Later Capraro told newsmen he saw Noel dragged away by Chinese Reds.

Noel, 52-year-old veteran of many Korean campaigns, volunteered to take a jeep down the road after it became apparent the Reds were coming at the convoy from all sides. He was going after assistance.

That's when the Reds got him.

Frank had seen many wars—the big ones and the nasty little ones. Somewhere along the line, maybe in Burma or Germany or Palestine or Greece, Frank forgot how to be afraid.

He stayed up front—with the companies and the platoons—more during the past six weeks than any other newsman or photographer I know of.

His last great photo beat was the first shot of the Changjin Reservoir when the Marines finally punched their way there. He got it by walking across the snowy hills with the first patrol.

Frank snapped the picture from a nearby lifeboat. He had left doomed Singapore enroute to Calcutta after covering the 1941-42 winter Malayan campaign. The ship was sunk in a night attack, the first reported sinking by a Japanese submarine in the Indian Ocean.

He joined the Associated Press in 1937, after working for the Kansas City Star, the Oklahoma City News and the Wichita Eagle. After World War II, he covered the Mediterranean area, the Near East and Germany—until the Korean war broke out. He couldn't stay away from the biggest story of the year.

Washington's Community Chest drive is nearing its goal. Help send the drive over the top. Send your contribution in today.

U. N. Forces Leave Pyongyang

leading out of the city, as the retreating Eighth Army traded space for time to avoid entrapment.

Red guerillas were active along roads between Pyongyang and Seoul. They were North Koreans by-passed earlier in the war when the U. N. tide rolled north.

One guerilla force near Sibyon, 70 miles southeast of Pyongyang, attacked and drove back elements of the U. S. 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team. Reinforcements moved into the area.

Near Singye, 55 miles southeast of Pyongyang, a guerilla band of 2500 men was concentrated. Other guerilla bands were in action within 40 miles of Seoul.

The Chinese Communist masses, who have compelled the U. S. Eighth Army to retreat more than 70 miles since November 24, were under dawn-to-dusk air attack north of Pyongyang.

The Far East Air Force reported its planes killed 2100 Reds in North Korea Monday pushing the last three-day total past 6000.

There was little fighting on the northwest front in this darkest hour for United Nations arms since the North Korean Reds began the war June 25.

Overwhelmingly outnumbered, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the United States Eighth Army, was intent on keeping his force as intact as possible.

Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Eighth Army headquarters that the pullback might go as deep south as Seoul, 125 air miles to the southeast. There a perimeter could be thrown around the Republic of Korea capital and the escape port of Inchon.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, with the retreating army, said a decision must be made soon whether to stand and fight or quit Korea altogether.

Whitehead reported that most military men in the field believed the Chinese were determined to destroy the Eighth Army. If General Walker decides to stand and fight behind a curtain of air and artillery bombardment, his army will face odds no other American army ever has confronted.

Significantly, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, flew to the war zone for conferences with top commanders after a meeting with General MacArthur in Tokyo. A top-level decision could be in the making.

On the isolated northeastern front, fighting was heavy and bloody. In subzero temperatures, Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond's trapped Tenth Corps—three U. S. divisions and two ROK divisions—battled for life over vast distances.

The corps was spread thin over 23,000 square mile of frozen wasteland.

Chopped into segments by hard-striking Reds, Marines and soldiers succeeded in consolidating their forces after a bloody five-day battle near the Changjin Reservoir.

General Almond in a special communique announced Monday night that "fanatic efforts" by at least six Chinese divisions—48,000 to 60,000 men—to prevent the assembly of Marines and doughboys had been overcome.

Marines Take Heavy Toll

The reassembled Americans remained isolated in the Hagaru vicinity, however.

The Marines were elements of the United States First Marine Division's Fifth and Seventh Regiments. The soldiers were part of the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Regiments of the Seventh Infantry Division, which had South Koreans fighting in the ranks with Americans.

Almond said that "by blocking counter-attacks and coordinated fire and movement, the Marines hurled back the enemy, inflicting heavy losses."

There was no estimate of American casualties, but all indications were that they were high.

In three days ending Sunday at nightfall a total of 1700 wounded Americans were flown out of a snow-covered pasture at Hagaru, Marine held base at the south tip of the reservoir.

There was no estimate on how many more wounded remained.

Reds Near Hamhung

For the able-bodied Americans there was stiff new fighting ahead before they could break out of the Chinese trap and reach Hamhung, 40 air miles southeastward.

Some 40 B-26 light bombers Monday blasted a winding 9-mile road between Hagaru and Koto along which Chinese are deployed to force the Americans to run a new gantlet of fire.

Both Hagaru and Koto were under Red fire, while other Chinese troops moved in an arc within 15 miles of Hamhung itself.

General MacArthur's Monday afternoon war summary said U. N. forces north of Hamhung made a withdrawal. He did not specify the unit, exact location, or how far they had pulled back.

Isolated near the far northeastern boundary of Manchuria was the Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team of the Seventh Division. The only United States unit to reach the actual frontier, it has been ordered to withdraw.

There were no late reports on the Korean Republic's Capital Division, last reported on the extreme northeast coastal road within 40 miles of Soviet Siberia. Also unreported was the ROK Third Division northwest of Hamhung.

The United States Third Division, spread out between Hamhung and Wonsan, was grappling with increasing Chinese units sprouting up in the mountainous central neck of Korea.

These Chinese posed a mounting threat to the great Allied east coast supply base and airfields at Wonsan. Reds were last reported within 25 miles of Wonsan at one point and 13 miles at another, near Majon.

The crushing weight of Chinese manpower bearing down in both northeast and northwest was underscored by MacArthur's headquarters.

In his Monday afternoon summary MacArthur said Chinese Communist forces had hurled 268,000 men as shock troops against the United Nations army. Back of these came an immediate reserve of 550,000 more men. Moving up from central China toward the flaming war fronts were an additional 200,000. This totaled be added an additional 100,000 to 1,018,000 Chinese to which must 150,000 Red Koreans.

The assemblage of this mighty force was not the result of "sudden impulse," MacArthur again pointed out. He said it was preceded by long planning and started to move after the Korean Communist army was defeated in mid-October.

U. N. Has 200,000 Men

The United Nations army in Korea numbers no more than 200,000, half of these being South Korean troops.

The United States has roughly 100,000 men in Korea, while five other members of the U. N.—Britain, Australia, the Philippines, Turkey, and Thailand—have contributed jointly about 18,000 more.

United States casualties alone exceed 31,000 since the Korean Reds touched off the conflagration five months ago by invading the U. N.-sponsored South Korean Republic.

The retreating Allied forces had one factor in their favor: mobility. Their motorized equipment permitted a faster withdrawal pace than the massive but slow Chinese pursuing them. The Reds employed shaggy little Manchurian ponies and rugged two-hump camels to haul supplies and to mount some cavalrymen.

Correspondent Whitehead said it was mobility that saved the Eighth Army from outright destruction one week ago on the Chongchon River line.

Whitehead—a veteran of World War II—thought the Eighth Army could fight a rearguard delaying action while evacuating all the men and equipment possible to save them for "whatever the future may hold."

Allies completing withdrawal from Pyongyang may set up a new defense perimeter around Seoul (A), but in the northeast (B) United Nations troops, who have consolidated positions in the Changjin Reservoir area, still must fight their way through Reds reported massing for a drive on Hamhung and Hungnam (underlined) on the east coast. United States units on the Yalu River at Hyesanjin (C) have been ordered to withdraw, but there are no reports from ROK Capital Division troops who were advancing up the east coast (D)

Gibson Succeeds Carusi as Member Of DP Commission

President Truman accepted Ugo Carusi's resignation as chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission yesterday and nominated John W. Gibson, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, to serve in his place.

Gibson, well-known CIO leader in Michigan, was named only as a member of the commission, not as its chairman.

Carusi, former commissioner of immigration and naturalization, had been chairman of the DP agency for two years. He gave no particular reason for wanting to quit. The commission has been under sporadic fire from some Congressmen who didn't like the way the DP program was run.

President Truman praised the "superior legal abilities" Carusi had shown in previous Government jobs and congratulated him on his record as chairman

D. C. Flier Missing; 2 Wounded, 1 Hurt

AREA CASUALTY LIST:

Missing in flight—First Lieut. Harry T. Sandlin, 2480 16th st. nw.

Wounded in action—First Lieut. Robert T. Fallon, 1832 Jefferson pl. nw. Corpl. Howard Brown, 2302 G st. ne.

Injured—Corpl. Homer Thompson, jr., 1424 Duncan st. ne.

A 25-year-old jet pilot was reported missing in flight on November 25, soon after he wrote home here about his "113 missions over Korea—the most any pilot has in the Eightieth Fighter-Bomber Group."

Two Army men from the District have been listed as wounded and one injured on the latest Department of Defense Casualty List No. 167.

First Lieut. Harry T. Sandlin, son of Mrs. Barbara Tuckerman, 2480 16th st. nw., was diving an F-80 Shooting Star to rocket enemy positions on the ground when he lost a wing-tip gas tank, an Air Force report said. His plane was seen to "tail-spin" and crash to the ground. The official letter added that Lieutenant Sandlin would continue to be listed as missing "until his fate is known."

Sandlin had been flying out of Kimpo air base, Korea, for the past month. Previously he was based at the Itazuke field in southern Japan.

Gave Up Leave for Buddy

In a November 16 letter to his mother, Lieutenant Sandlin said he had been offered leave in Japan because of his mission record, but turned it down so a married buddy could take it.

Born in Chattanooga, Tenn., Lieutenant Sandlin attended Charlotte Hall Military Academy in Virginia. After Air Force cadet training, he was made a navigator in October, 1945. During World War II he served on the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador, for a year and at Olbruk Field, Canal Zone, two years.

He received pilot wings on September 30, 1949, after graduating from Las Vegas Air Force Base.

Among the wounded was a 1949 graduate of West Point, First Lieut. Robert T. Fallon, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Fallon, 1832 Jefferson pl. nw. Wounded on November 14, Lieutenant Fallon was flown back to Valley Forge General Hospital, Pa., for more operations. While taking a hill below Kapsan, a bullet caught him in a crouching position, entering about an inch from his heart and severing his arm and leg. He was a platoon leader with the Seventeenth Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division.

Could Feel Feet Freezing

Lieutenant Fallon told his mother the cold near the Manchurian border was "terrific." He could feel his feet freezing as they carried him down from the hill, he said.

He was a graduate of Wilson High School and Sullivans Prep School.

Corpl. Howard Brown, 20, grandson of Mrs. Hattie Rembert, 2302 G st. ne., was reported wounded in the back on November 1. He is now recuperating in a hospital in Japan, according to his grandmother, who reared him since the age of 3.

After attending Garnet Patterson Junior High School, he joined the Army in January, 1948, and was sent to Fort Dix, N. J. About five months ago he went to Korea and worked there on postoffice duty. Corporal Brown has a sister, Mrs. Nelly Carroll, 1306 R st. nw.

Corporal Thompson Convalescing

Corpl. Homer Thompson, 20, son of Mrs. Marie Thompson, 1424 Duncan st. ne., is convalescing in Valley Forge General Hospital, after an injury to his leg October 25. A former middleweight boxer, Corporal Thompson has several trophies. He won nine fights, lost two.

He attended Brown Junior High School, leaving school to join the ranks in June, 1948. From Fort Knox, Ky., where he continued to train and box, he was sent to Korea in July, 1950. No word was received from him until he was reported "injured." Since then, Mrs. Thompson has received several calls from the hospital.

Two Maryland and three Virginia men were also listed as casualties. Pfc. Carson L. Keseckker, 249 W. 5th st., Frederick, Md., was wounded in action. Injured are Corp. Douglas R. Brown, Route 1, Box 243, Waynesboro, Va., and Corp. Carl W. Shifflett, 1008 Concord ave., Charlottesville, Va. Missing in action are Pfc. Everett W. Ritneour, 621 S. Main st., Woodstock, Va., and Pfc. Francis A. Jameson, Hughesville, Md.

Fliers Kill 2100 Reds in Day's Work

TOKYO (Tuesday) Dec. 5 (AP).—An estimated 2100 Communists were killed in North Korea Monday in Allied air strikes, the Far East Air Force reported today. This was the second time in three days the estimated death toll from air strikes had exceeded 2000.

Fighter and bomber planes returned to heavy duty today with good flying weather.

Night intruder missions last night were concentrated on the Changjin Reservoir area in northeast Korea where United States Marines and Infantrymen had fought bitterly for days to escape Communist entrapment.

Fighters and bombers covered all battle fronts with a total of 300 sorties Monday. Pilots reported destroying or damaging two tanks, 77 vehicles, 329 troop-occupied structures, fuel dumps and gun positions.

B-29 Superfortresses plastered three main Red supply centers in northwest Korea—Anju, Tokchon and Huichon—with fire bombs and general purpose bombs.

Fighters struck at abandoned Sunchon, hitting 50 buildings, strafing troops and attacking a train and railroad tunnel near the city.

Carrier-based Navy and Marine planes blasted the Chinese in the Changjin Reservoir area. The Navy said heavy casualties were inflicted.

Justice Has One Eye

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Artist Michael Viertel was jailed for two months today and fined 100 marks ($23.81) for putting keyholes around photographs of a dancer undressing in her boudoir. The judge said Viertel was punished not for the pictures but for the keyholes. That, the judge said, made them "unchaste."

Jittery Congressmen Ask Swift Action in Korean Crisis

By The Associated Press.

Aroused Congress members yesterday demanded swift action to deal with Red China in the Korean war crisis and attacked the Truman Administration with renewed calls for the ouster of Secretary of State Acheson.

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), newly returned from talks with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Tokyo, said MacArthur should be given immediate authority to hit Chinese Communist bases in Manchuria and called for the expulsion of Soviet Russia from the United Nations.

Senator Chavez (D., N. Y.) urged the United States to raise a 20-million-man "world army," trained and equipped as American soldiers, to battle communism.

All-out War Urged

Senator Stennis (D., Miss.) told the Senate the United States should wage all-out war in Korea—"strike with everything we have or evacuate and get out."

Stennis also declared—as did Knowland and several other lawmakers—that the time has come to throw Chinese Nationalist troops into the fight against the Reds. President Truman said last week it was hoped that keeping these troops out of the fight would avoid involvement in a world war.

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), advising the withdrawal of American forces from Korea, said in a statement:

"The supreme consideration now is to get our soldiers out and prevent a general slaughter."

Hoey said he was unwilling to have the United States become involved in an "endless war" with China because it would mean "exhausting our resources and sacrificing American soldiers."

Senators Kem (R., Mo.) and Malone (R., Nev.) told the Senate that Secretary Acheson should resign or be fired. Kem accused Acheson of having "blundered into war" and then tying Gen. MacArthur's hands in Korea.

"Acheson must go," Kem said.

Representative Jensen (R., Iowa.), in a House speech bitterly attacking the Administration's policies, said Congress need not follow the White House leadership in what he described as "this mess" in Korea.

"If need be, we can impeach the President, That's one of our prerogatives," Jensen declared.

Probably Worst Crisis

Representative Allen (R., Ill.) called the crisis "probably the worst in the history of our country," while Representative Cox (D., Ga.) charged that the "suicidal policy of appeasement" was responsible for the situation.

Senators Eastland (D., Miss.) and Knowland both called for a naval blockade of the entire Red China coast.

Knowland told the Senate there must be "no appeasement" toward the Chinese Communists, and he declared:

"This is the fateful hour in the history of our Nation and the entire free world.

"Cringe before Communist aggression today and countless men who are now free may be bending their backs in the slave labor camps a year or two from now."

Knowland said if General MacArthur agrees, Chinese Nationalist troops should be used to attack Chinese Reds wherever they can find them.

The California Senator said there were 600,000 Nationalist soldiers on Formosa, the last-ditch island stronghold of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, and one million anti-Communist guerillas on the Chinese mainland.

"If we take the wraps off the Republic of China," he said, "it would immediately cause the Chinese Communists to reverse the flow of troops going to Korea and force them to begin to look to their own defenses."

As we've been saying for quite a spell—"Whatever your price range—Better buy Buick."

But maybe we'd better get down to brass tacks, as to just what this suggestion means.

In the lower-price field, this has been happening:

Four out of ten Buick SPECIALS—bought by people with a car to trade in—have been bought by folks who formerly drove one of the so-called "low-priced three." They found they could afford a Buick!

In the fine-car field, something even more impressive has happened:

Four out of five people who looked at a ROADMASTER and another very distinguished automobile decided in favor of ROADMASTER!

So—whatever your price range, take a look at our prices—and at what you get for your money.

What you get is the thrill of owning the greatest Buick of all time—as registered by record-breaking sales.

What you get is power and style and comfort and performance that are hard to match in any other automobile.

More specifically—you get the power-with-thrift of Buick's famous Fireball high-compression engine—a style that stands out in any company—a ride with the comfort of coil springs on every wheel—and performance that makes you feel like the head man on any highway.

Speed Civil Defense Mayors Urge U.S.

By the United Press

A group of United States mayors and other city officials took both President Truman and Congress to task yesterday for "moving too slowly in drafting plans for civilian defense against atomic attack.

The charges were leveled at a meeting of the Civil Defense Committee of the American Municipal Association. The association is holding its annual three-day congress here to consider a host of tough problems facing city governments.

Earlier, it heard Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) assert that the primary responsibility for getting the civil defense program rolling rests with the cities themselves. He said Congress will begin hearings on the matter when it returns January 3.

Mayor William Devin of Seattle told the group, however, that the issue is too important to wait another month.

"We can't accept this date," he said. "We must insist that the problem be taken up right now."

Other delegates agreed the seriousness of the world situation requires immediate action. They decided tentatively that the municipal congress should approve a resolution "calling for a statement from the President and other responsible officers of the Government stating the urgency of the situation."

After that, they said, "the policies and actions of the Federal Government should reflect that statement." They said that until the Federal Government acts, there is relatively little cities can do to make any real progress towards protecting civilians from an A-bombing.

Executive Director Richard Graves of the League of California Cities said Federal officials are falling down on the job of providing adequate leadership in civil defense. But he said a "great deal" has been accomplished by cities anyway.

Newton Says We're at War

Mayor Quigg Newton of Denver, Colo., association president, reminded municipal officials their job is to tackle "the task of national survival." The United States, he said, "is at war . . . with the strongest and most determined enemy we have ever faced."

Newton said cities had been able to survive in the past despite inefficiency and corruption, but this is no longer possible. He said the "doctrine of the political boss is wholly antidemocratic."

Mayor DeLesseps S. Morrison of New Orleans said the "fight is not won" to put sufficient pressure on organized crime, and asked full support for the Kefauver Senate Crime Committee. He said racketeers must be deported, or "exposed, punished and emasculated of their influence."

District Called Unprepared In Atomic Warfare Defense

Thirty civic, fraternal and veterans organizations representatives were warned yesterday that the Nation's Capital is unprepared for defense against atomic warfare.

Col. Leonce R. Legendre, a former civilian defense expert, declared that "chaos would result" if Washington were bombed tomorrow, and only a handful of special services were "ready to do anything about it."

The World War II executive officer for the Washington office of civilian defense called for "volunteer aid to assist" Inspector John E. Fondahl, chairman of the Washington Area Civilian Defense Committee.

"He can't do it alone," Colonel Legendre asserted, "People now are lethargic and think we can't be bombed."

He addressed a luncheon meeting of an American Legion-sponsored coordinating committee, originally formed three months ago to draft a program for hospitality for visiting servicemen. The group, yet officially unnamed, is looking for new projects which a coordinating body of city-wide club representatives can handle more effectively than single units.

A four-man investigating committee was appointed by Acting Chairman Walter L. Morgan, jr., department commander of the American Legion, to "find out from the District Commissioners what can be done about a more effective civilian defense plan for the area."

Its members were Colonel Legendre, now assistant national adjutant of the Legion; Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Edward S. J. Peters, commander of the Catholic War Veterans; and Col. W. E. Leonard, director of the Veterans Service Center.

Yesterday's hearing before the atomic group was an "extra," since Vice President Barkley ruled two hours earlier that the Administration's civil defense bill would be considered by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

McMahon, hopeful his group would get the nod on the legislation, had scheduled yesterday's hearing before the Barkley ruling.

Speedy action on the measure on both sides of the Capitol was assured last night.

Civil defense officials will be heard by the House Armed Services Committee at 2 p. m. today.

On the Senate side, Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Armed Services' civil defense subcommittee, said he will start hearings at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday and "continue them every afternoon until we are through."

Barkley had urged prompt congressional action on the preparedness measure because of its "great importance."

• Kefauver told reporters his group would ask McMahon's to "participate" in the hearings since the atomic committee had held several hearings on the subject during the past year.

Both Symington and Wadsworth emphasized the role that "every citizen must play in the event of an enemy attack."

"When it comes to civil defense," said Wadsworth, "there can be no 'take-to-the-hills' mentality or 'let-George-do-it' attitude in this country.

"Our cities must be manned and fought just as our Navy ships are manned and fought," he added.

In a "progress report," Wadsworth gave these previously-undisclosed civil defense developments:

1. A series of field tests on a number of potential types of air-raid shelters will be conducted in the "immediate future."

2. Civil defense officials this week will release specifications for Geiger counters suitable to test radiation effects of an atomic bomb blast.

3. There are now six active field representatives of the Federal defense office consulting with State and local officials.

4. Two new manuals will be issued this month. One, "The Fire effects of Bombing Attacks" will be made public December 11. The other, "The Civil Defense Health Service Manual", will be sent into the field before the first of the year.

In response to a question by Senator Milliken (R., Colo.) Wadsworth said no city today is "completely prepared" for civil defense.

Locally, legal representatives of Maryland, Virginia and the District, in a morning conference, decided that the civil defense directors of the three jurisdictions should begin immediately to draft a model compact for mutual defense in the Washington area.

"Yes," the boy said, "and I want you to be careful with it."

Santa eased through the ticklish situation by promising to treat the sleigh carefully

Child Evacuation In War Predicted

Children would be evacuated from danger areas and separated from their families in future wars and steps should be taken now to minimize their effects.

That is what Dr. John R. Rees, British psychiatrist and director of the World Federation for Mental Health, told delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth yesterday.

Dr. Rees said evacuation of children is still necessary for saving life and it "creates problems of home life."

"In future wars," he predicted, "it is probable that evacuation and going to shelter will be compulsory."

Basing his remarks on British experience in World War II, he said "the greatest problem for children is separation—the difficulty of adapting themselves to separation from family friends." Dr. Rees said this led to all kinds of "regression"—"bed wetting, dullness, aggressive indifference."

Dr. Rees said that, before the age of five, any child thus evacuated is liable to "suffer from insecurity and character distortion." He stressed the need for a program now of education of foster parents to deal with such problems.

Dr. Rees spoke to a panel discussing the influence of mobilization and war on children. "There are plenty of defenses against atomic warfare," he said. "There are plenty of wise things which can be done and must be done to alert the people to their dangers . . . You may be put off by some of the nonsense on atomic warfare. There is more nonsense being written than you would believe."

Mrs. Lois Meek Stolz, a professor of psychology at Stanford University, who followed Dr. Rees on the panel, said that "Mothers with infants should be the last source of manpower in war." She said there should be "no evacuation of infants without their mothers."

are no good reasons aside from the immense inertia of our institutions and customs why we cannot improve the situation."

Dr. Spock said the White House conference was needed because: "A large percentage of our people are ineffectual or unhappy and they make everyone else miserable. There is too much cruelty and hatred and suspicion and fear. There are too many mentally ill people. The number of marriages that end in divorce suggests a disturbing degree of immaturity in the supposedly adult years. There are too many criminals."

Dr. Mayo also issued a warning to the delegates:

"Unless we learn better how to evaluate and apply knowledge, the sources of pure research cannot be strengthened and vast human waste will be continued. Until more of our money, our strength, our intelligence and our scientific 'know how' is applied to application, we will continue to fall short of our potentialities."

"We failed for a long while to apply what we knew about cultures and races to relatively simple problems of cultural and racial relations. Had we worked on that earlier and with some of the zeal that went into atomic research, we would have discovered that . . . knowledge is not enough," Dr. Mayo said.

The atom bomb threat hung heavy over the first full day's conference proceedings, even though delegates tried to ignore it in their eager momentum to get on with their prescribed goal: "For Each Child a Healthy Personality."

The delegates left the general morning session to get into 15 panel discussions of some of the problems the conference is detailed to study.

In one such panel Lee R. Johnson, executive vice president of the National Housing Conference, attacked the "timidity and bureaucracy" of the Federal administration for the "tragic failure" of its housing program.

He said the National Association of Home Builders, the U. S. Savings and Loan League and the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association have embarked on a "crusade to kill low-rent housing and perpetuate slums."

In another panel, Elbridge Sibley, executive associate of the Social Science Research Council, said there is a shorter period of experience than ever before "in living as mature members of our own parental families before getting married and starting raising families of our own.

The President's address is scheduled to be carried by the following: WRC and the NBC network at 11 a.m.; ABC network, 3 p.m. but WMAL at 10 p.m.; CBS network at 4:30 p.m. (but no local broadcast), WCFM at 10 p.m.

Delinquency Rise Foreseen

By Dorothea Cruger
Post Reporter

A large increase in juvenile delinquency in the next ten years was predicted yesterday by Harold Hegstrom, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys.

Addressing a panel meeting of the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, Hegstrom blamed wartime increases in births, unmatched by a corresponding increase in school facilities.

Hegstrom urged the conference to give "serious thought" to changing the armed forces practice of rejecting men with records of delinquency. He said it was unfair to allow such a record to follow a boy throughout his life.

"There is a great need for more juvenile court judges and fewer judges assigned to juvenile courts," Judge Gustav Schramm of the Pittsburgh Juvenile Court told the panel. "No interest is closer to the heart of the public than the welfare of its children, yet relatively few people understand the work that is being done by our juvenile courts," he said.

The juvenile court judge, he said, has a unique opportunity to help the child. He can best reach him by "man to man" talks, as one child put it, and by making him feel the judge is his friend, the probation officer his "partner." The judge, he added, is also able to interpret the court's work to the community, and to make use of local leaders and facilities to help offenders before they become "damaged goods," or actual criminals.

"There has been too much feeling that once a kid becomes a juvenile delinquent, we might as well give him up for lost," Dr. Frank Curran of the University of Virginia Medical School told the audience.

Schools Fail Youth, 2 Delegates Say

Lots of Lines

Crowds Were Everywhere At Conclave

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Picture the main concourse at Union Station the day before a holiday and you'll have some idea of the mob scene that ook place at the National Guard Armory yesterday as 6000 delegates from all over the United States arrived for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

In fact, everything was so crowded all day that one delegate cynically remarked, "We could get twice as much done if we had half as few people here." A lady delegate, after struggling wearily to find her work group in the vast armory, murmured, "We could use some of this youth right now to guide us to our meeting places."

White-badged delegates, arms laden with conference material, set off in the morning to panel groups, returned at noon to the main hall to fight their way through cafeteria lines that wound halfway through the mammoth hall.

Later they sat at lunch tables and over vast quantities of hot dogs and cokes many of them renewed friendships of high school and college days.

Group participation in the afternoon work sessions was so lively that discussion leaders pleaded with each other to tone down clapping, cheering and general enthusiasm so participants in adjoining rooms could get their work done.

Whenever they had a free minute, delegates visited the some 100 exhibits in the main lobby. Here photographs of Hawaiian work youth, Boy Scout hobbies, and children's encyclopedias were displayed almost side by side.

One of the most frequented spots, however, was an orange-juice machine where delegates could quench their thirst without standing in the almost interminable lines. Some who tried to solve their food problems by crossing the street to a Government cafeteria found themselves barred for security reasons.

Modern youth, caught in an era of conflicting values, looks to adults and to education for help in solving problems, and finds both lacking.

Two college students—delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth—yesterday summarized this as their disillusionment and said it was a product of the philosophy of materialism which they have inherited.

George Lewis, 20-year-old farm boy, now attending the University of Illinois, and Muriel Habel, 17, of 1015 North Noyes dr., Silver Spring, a freshman at Middlebury College, Vt., declared that youth needs spiritual guidance not found in schools.

"We will be what you teach us to be," Lewis, speaker at one of the panels, told a room crowded with teachers, psychiatrists and religious leaders.

"We have been taught that our success depends upon what we get not what we can give," Lewis said. "We have been trained in school that you are not a success unless you belong to the biggest corporation, make the biggest salary and drive the biggest car.

"You are training us to leave God out of school. Why will we then not leave God out of politics and business?" Lewis asked.

Miss Habel declared that college students today are "disillusioned to he point of feeling that they are atheists."

"We need adult guidance to bring about a framework in which we can establish our own philosophy of life," she declared.

In another panel, Columnist Marqis Child pointed out that "our education is not producing citizen responsibilty in our society."

He said the number of persons participating in politics grows smaller each year and the withdrawal is due to the citizen's belief he has no control over his own destiny.

Childs said that this negative response has resulted from the "timid neutrality" that teachers have taken in presenting social and political sciences.

"The adolescent youth has been encouraged to accept the fruits of a free society without contributing to its sustenance or its future growth.

Youth Wants Partnership With Adults, Parley Told

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

American youth is ready and anxious to establish a working partnership with its seniors, delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth were told last night.

"It is important that the adult community learn that we young people learn through doing," Arnulf M. Pins, 23, of Paterson, N. J., told the general session in the National Guard Armory. "Only by working together with adults on common concerns can youth acquire the knowledge and skills necessary for its future responsibility."

Pins, a student at the New York School of Social Work of Columbia University and chairman of the Advisory Council on Youth Participation, was the chief speaker.

A highlight of the program was the presentation of a "Resolution of Appreciation" to Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency, since 1934.

The resolution, presented by the council, paid tribute to Miss Lenroot's "outstanding service to American children" and "devoted guidance and sincere spirit in the Midcentury Conference."

Pins was introduced by Di Anne Mathre, 19, of De Kalb, Ill.

Three other youthful speakers on the program were Stefan Anderson, 16, of Madison, Wis., junior high school student; Ernestine Herbin, 19, a sophomore at Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C., and Nancy Rossman, 17, a student at Towson, Md. High School.

Anderson said "youth can receive a tremendous amount of training by working and planning with adults.

"American youth must be kept aware of the responsibilities of the world," he said.

Miss Herbin, hitting at separate school systems for Negroes and whites, said "as long as they are separate, you know what the conditions are."

Outside assistance should be given schools in economically inferior areas of the country, she said, "to provide equal opportunity in education for all."

Anxiety Cause of Child Woes

What makes some parents reject their children?

That was one of the questions which delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth asked themselves yesterday in their panel discussions.

The answer, as given by Sibylle Escalona, of the Menninger Foundation Department of Research:

Parents are too concerned with anxieties they deal with in their own lives. "Their sense of futility and cynical resignation stand in the way. We are forced to recognize that the health and well being of future generations is the result of the health and welfare of adults who constitute the world of the child.

Other Critical Discussions

There were other critical discussions of the family relationships as the panels got underway.

Lawrence K. Frank, a member of the board of leaders of the New York Ethical Culture Society, said:

"There has been a cold war between parents and teachers for a long time." He thought that schools, instead of criticizing parents, should help them to be "good parents."

His view was shared by Dr. Charlotte Elmott, director of guidance for the schools for Santa Barbara, Calif.:

"We in the child-rearing profession spend too much time talking down to parents, telling them what they do wrong, instead of helping them out. Over the years we've blamed parents for everything that has happened to children. We should change our attitude — get acquainted—work in small groups where they can discuss their problems."

Assails Old Theory

Another aspect of the parent-child relationship was dealt with by F. S. Ashley Montague, a social biologist at Rutgers University. He said the whole myth of heredity versus environment in families should be "drummed out." He declared that heredity factors undergo development in a social environment which has an enormous amount to do with the final result.

Dr. Fritz Redl, professor of group work at Wayne University, wrong is that often "adults are claims that one thing which is green with envy of youth."

"The adult's own case history creeps up on him," Dr. Redl further explained. Some specific behavior of youth reminds his elders of similar events in the past, and the adult reacts in the same way he did to the original event.

Environment Status Sought By Children

An established "status in his home circle, his school and his community" is essential to the growth of the child.

This "sense of belonging," which a child needs for his mental health, also will train him in ways of democracy, a panel of students, educators and other youth leaders concluded yesterday at the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Both the home and the school were criticized for not preparing youth for their responsibilities as citizens.

Youth Participation Urged

The group also urged that every community canvas the possibility of youth participation in local affairs to let youth assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

In an afternon work group, William Heard Kilpatrick, professor emeritus of educational philosophy at Teachers College, Columbia University, declared that students do not learn to live in a democratic society under autocratic rule.

"People learn behavior by behaving," he said. "If we want children to grow toward maturity at the 5, 7 and 11-year-old level, we will have to give them a chance to act mature."

John Lee, 16-year-old high school junior from Birmingham, Ala., said "a teacher who conscientiously tries to teach democracy will let a student express his views."

Dr. Earl James McGrath, United States Commissioner of Education, told one of the conference groups that "parents interested in effective citizenship" should ask themselves if democracy is practiced in the home.

"Does the whole family share in the making of important decisions? Do we demonstrate respect for the individual dignity and integrity of our children? Do we give their ideas the proper weight? Are they junior partners or submissive subjects?"

Women's Medical Group To Have Cancer Talks

Medical aspects of cancer will be discussed tonight at a meeting of the Women's Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

"Don't send a boy to do a man's job!"

When there's a man-size transportation job to be done, who gets it? That's right... the railroads!

For example, during World War II, the railroads were given the job of handling 97% of all organized military travel, 90% of the war freight and 70% of all freight moved in this country.

Today, another man-size transportation job is shaping up. And once again the railroads are the only form of transportation "man enough" to handle the great bulk of the job... a job too big for all other carriers combined.

A strong America must have strong railroads. That's why it is in the public interest—your interest—to give railroads every opportunity to be always strong... always ready to do man-size transportation jobs.

This is a good time briefly to appraise our international situation and our foreign policies. After that appraisal I shall offer some suggestions.

If we take a broad retrospective view of American foreign policies over the years after 1933, we will find one outstanding feature. All that time American statesmanship became lost when it came to the borders of Communism. And the consequences of our wanderings still crowd in upon us.

We first entered this swamp of lost statesmanship when we recognized the Communist Government in 1933. Four Presidents and five Secretaries of State—Democrats and Republicans alike—had refused to invite Communist representatives into this American home of free men.

Those Americans knew that all Communists carried germs of conspiracy intended to turn America into a police state, to destroy all religious faiths, to overthrow the freedom of men and the independence of nations.

If you need any reminders of what they did to our hospitality, read again the repentant Communist confessions, the Congressional exposures, the pleas of self-incrimination and the convictions of traitors in our courts.

These carriers of evil germs penetrated into high places of government. They influenced national policies at the highest levels.

Results of Russian Pacts

I will not dwell at length upon our successive wanderings into these sinister borders of Communism. However, I may mention our tacit alliance with Soviet Russia in June, 1941, while Dictator Stalin and Hitler engaged in war of mutual exhaustion.

Many of us protested that such an alliance would spread Communism over the earth. Beyond this, in the words of a profound student, Hanson Baldwin, "The great opportunity of the democracies for establishing a stable peace came on June 22, 1941, when Germany invaded Russia, but we muffed it."

I could recall the step-by-step acquiescences and appeasements of Soviet Russia after we entered the war. They were punctuated by agreements made in Moscow in October, 1943; Tehran, one month later; Yalta, in February, 1945; and Potsdam, in August that same year.

In net result we abandoned the principles of the Atlantic Charter and the freedoms of men. In the end, we acquiesced in actual Russian annexation of about 40 million free people in Northern Europe.

We acquiesced in her envelopment of the governments of over 500 million people of 13 nations behind the Iron Curtain in Europe and in Asia. Every stage of our relations saw compromises and defeats of American ideals and purposes.

Legacy From Lenin

Due to the valor of our soldiers and the energies of our industries, we won military victory in the war.

But we lost the peace trying to appease the Communists.

We have constantly ignored Lenin's teachings which have been publicly known for 30 years. He said:

"As long as capitalism and Socialism remain we cannot live in peace. In the end one or the other will triumph—a funeral requiem will be sung either over the Soviet Republic or over world capitalism.

"We have to use any ruse, dodges, tricks, concealment and veiling of the truth."

Every year Stalin vows his loyalties to Lenin's teachings. All these 17 years have confirmed these malignant policies.

If you want more evidence that these are the principles of Soviet Russia, just remember that within 12 years they have violated 36 solemn agreements with other nations.

They have vetoed efforts toward peace in the United Nations 45 times. They engineered the attack on Korea. And every day they engage in defamation of the American people.

There is a stern lesson for the American people from these 17 years of experience.

Every American who has tried to deal with them has come away with his face and hands smeared with red tar.

Every time our Government has attempted to cooperate with them, we become involved in a morass of lost statesmanship.

Appraisals of Situation

The immediate problem which now confronts us is: How can we reorganize our instrumentalities for peace so as to give the world renewed hope? How can we secure peace—even an uneasy peace?

Before I make some suggestions, we must coldly appraise the world situation in which we find ourselves.

1. Our great hope in the United Nations. For five years with the one exception of the Korean action when the Russians were away on a blackmail strike, they have paralyzed that organization.

2. Nothing will stop Communist military aggression except an effective organized phalanx of the non-Communist world which will freeze the ambitions of the Kremlin.

3. We are told by many military authorities that Stalin could put 175 mobilized combat divisions on the European front within 90 days. We are told they have 30,000 tanks, thousands of planes and the atom bomb.

We are told they have large reserve forces. We are told that the Iron Curtain states have large armies poised for action. We are told they have huge forces in North Asia equipped by Russia.

In contrast we are told that the European nations now in the North Atlantic Alliance do not have available to Europe more than 30 active combat divisions with some air and naval power, with which to meet this horde from behind the Iron Curtain. We are told that South Asia has but little military strength to oppose the Communists.

Comparison of Resources

4. The industrial potential of the United States can be overpowering in the long run. But Stalin, now having also the industrial power of the Iron Curtain states, can arbitrarily concentrate it on preparedness.

Western Europe with a larger population than the United States has as large or greater industrial power than that of Stalin. It is being little occupied in preparedness. It could be quickly mobilized and could constitute a doubly-overwhelming balance of industrial power.

5. We must realize, and the world must realise, that 160 million Americans cannot alone maintain the safety of the world against 800 million Communists on the fronts of both Europe and Asia.

Nor can we, out of our resources and manpower, contribute more than a minority part in such a phalanx of force.

6. We are told by the civilians and military leaders of our Government that we stand in the greatest of perils. We have inaugurated an immense military program.

The consequences of this program to our economic life are already evident. Under it taxes will take a greater portion of our national income than that taken by most non-Communist countries in Europe.

Already we are in the midst of a disastrous wave of inflation from its pressures. We must defer many needed improvements.

We can stand this for possibly two or three years pending a genuine rally by the non-Communist world to their full part in defense. But we must in time have relief from a large part of that burden.

We cannot carry the load for long without fulfilling Stalin's hopes of bleeding us economically to impotence.

Keys to Military Defense

7. There are three sources from which real military defense must come.

First. The European nations in the North American Alliance.

Second. The other non-Communist nations who are members of the United Nations, such as Canada, Latin America, the Middle East, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and some of the smaller South Asian countries.

Third. And there is the United States.

We will successfully clean up the Korean aggression under General MacArthur's brilliant generalship and teach a lesson.

However, our greatest danger point to all Western civilization is Western Europe. It is obvious, with the threats in Asia, that the United States can supply only a minor part of this huge European deficiency even with our present program.

The time has come, therefore, to speak frankly what is in the mind of many Americans today. And I speak not only as one who has witnessed two world wars, but with substantial military advice.

We know that the European nations now in the North Atlantic Pact (with American aid) have reached a greater industrial productivity than they had before either World War I or World War II.

They have larger populations and more manpower than in those wars. In both these two wars, these peoples put in the field in 90 days more than 140 equipped and trained combat divisions in addition to Naval and air forces.

Billions for Resistance

When the fabulous expenditures of various loans, together with the Marshall Plan and the North Atlantic Pact were laid before the American people, certain results were promised.

It was emphasized that besides economic and social objectives these gigantic sums would build the European nations into a united military defense against aggression upon Western civilization. It was represented as the American first line of defense.

We consented to these sacrifices primarily on this promise. It has been costly. Outside of Lend-Lease during the war, we have spent since the war ended in gifts, and loans (which are also bound to be gifts) almost 20 billion dollars in Europe on this faith.

We have not begrudged these huge sacrifices. But the result has been deeply disappointing to a growing body of Americans.

Competent observers are daily raising the serious question as to whether these nations, outside of Britain, have the will to fight, or even the will to preparedness. The actions and statements of their own leaders give little evidence of any real determination.

Mobilizing of Free Nations

Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter is a specific agreement as to mobilization of effective military and economic forces from every member to stop aggression. It provides in detail for its organization and command.

For five years the Russians have thwarted any practical realization of that agreement.

I am glad to see the recent proposals for the better mobilization of military strength by the members of the United Nations to stop aggression. That was also a step in the right direction.

However, we must face reality. The United States ultimately must have relief from a considerable part of our present burdens. No patrols or token forces will present so grim a visage to Moscow as would choke their military ambitions.

We need strong medicine in the shape of large and definite armies both from European members of the North Atlantic Pact and from the other non-Communist members of the United Nations.

Method of Action Proposed

To get action, either the potency and organization of the United Nations under Chapter VII should be so restored, notwithstanding Russian obstruction, as to take over a real job, or, alternatively, we should enlarge the North Atlantic Alliance into a world alliance which could in this fashion execute Chapter VII of the Charter.

We should, in either case, ask all nations who want to stop Russian aggression once and for all to join and to specify what they will join with and when.

We should say at once that the United States, with all its resources, cannot long endure the present drain on our economy. And if that fails, the world goes into night.

But if we do not find real military action of powerful strength in Western Europe; if there is no definite and effective mobilization of the other members of the United Nations so as to take up the major burden of their own defenses, then we had better reconsider our whole relation to the problem.

In that event, we had better quit talking and paying, and consider holding the Atlantic Ocean with Britain (if they wish) as one frontier, and the Pacific Ocean with an armed Japan and other islands as the other frontier.

Looking to 'Real Peace'

Let there be no misunderstandings.

I am conveying no military secrets to the Kremlin. They are able to read the open books of the democracies from our congressional debates and our press, even if they have no other intelligence service.

I am giving no aid to Stalin by stimulating defense against him.

I am not talking of any such thing as attack or a preventive war. I abhor the thought of it.

What I propose is such defense as prevents attack upon us.

I advise no retreat from the Communist front. I vastly prefer a consolidated front in full strength rather than being forced to reform our lines by failure of other nations.

What we want is real peace. But if we cannot have that, at least we want an uneasy peace within the economic burdens which the United States can bear.

Our hope must be that the Russian people will sometime, in perhaps the long future, throw off this evil regime as they did that of the czars.

Then real peace could come, because the mass of the Russian people themselves are a peaceful people. With faith in God that, I believe, will sometime be the outcome.

Churchill's Views Quoted

In confirmation, I need only to quote Winston Churchill who stated, in a public address, a few weeks ago:

"Imposing conferences have been held between military chiefs and experts, and a pretentious facade has been displayed by the Governments responsible for our safety.

"In fact, however, apart from the establishment of an American bomber base in England, nothing has been done to give any effective protection to our people from being subjugated or destroyed by the Russian Communist Armies with their masses of armor and aircraft.

"I and others have given what warnings we could, but, as in the past, they fell on unheeding ears or were used to sustain the false accusation of warmongering."

Mr. Churchill seemed to think Europe had only two years in which to arm.

Our American officials in the recent conference of Foreign Ministers again urged the necessity of a unified European defense army embracing German components. That proposal has again been defeated or delayed.

An Answer to Europe

All this situation has come as a great shock to thinking Americans. These failures raise serious questions.

Are we being misled as to the seriousness of this situation? Have these nations such convincing evidence of the Kremlin's good intentions that they are not interested in defense?

Has Karl Marx paralyzed the will of nations for independence? Do they expect the United States and Britain to carry the whole load in case of attack?

The time has come when the American people should speak out in much stronger tones than the diplomatic phrases of conference halls.

We should be willing to aid but, if Western Europe wants defense from the Communist tide, they must do most of it themselves—and do it fast.

Someone proposed that we at once increase our forces in Europe to 10 combat divisions. That would be only a slaughter of American boys unless many times that number were standing by their sides.

We should say, and at once, that we shall provide no more money until a definitely unified and sufficient European Army is in sight. And further that 10 American divisions will not be landed until then.

Nor is such an army in Europe even with American forces alone sufficient to dull Kremlin ambitions in both Europe and Asia.

Reshaping United Nations

Five months ago, and again three months ago, I urged that the United Nations be so reorganized as to permit the mobilization of the non-Communist world on military, economic and moral bases to meet these aggressions.

I suggested this could never happen with the Communist constantly making the United Nations impotent. I gave ample reasons.

The official reception of that idea was hostile. The press reception was sympathetic or favorable.

Every day since that statement was made has proved its validity. And the validity of that proposal was doubly proved three months ago when, for the first time in all its history due to the absence of the Communist, the United Nations has shown what real leadership could accomplish.

I have been gratified by the recognition of the validity of my sugestion by the proposals of a change in the rules of the United Nations by which Russian obstruction within that organization might be defeated.

Poll Taxes And Schools

Fewer than 20 percent of the adult residents of Arlington County voted in the recent referendum in which the school bond issue was defeated by a narrow margin. This fact in itself ought to be a spur to those Arlingtonians who want better schools but who did not express themselves at the polls. Registration for voting in Virginia is contingent upon payment of poll taxes, and the deadline for payment of poll taxes without penalty is today, December 5—though taxes paid with a penalty before December 12 will still enable a citizen to register. Registration itself may be accomplished until a few days before an election. No new bond issue referendum has been called in Arlington as yet, but one certainly will be coming up shortly. The only way to put it across is for those persons who understand the need for accommodating the thousands of new youngsters in schools to get out and vote. No one who fails to qualify for registration can blame anyone but himself.

What Kind Of Defense?

In the light of the President's request for 18 billion dollars more for defense, some hard thought needs to be given as to how the United States can best attain the defense force it needs. Assuredly the Air Force, as the main striking arm and the country's protector against air assault, demands a substantial buildup. If worst comes to worst and we must use the atom bomb as a strategic weapon, then we must have the equipment to deliver it. We also need more fighters to prevent, insofar as possible, enemy air attack on the United States, as well as a real radar warning system.

But, aside from the existing strategic bombing force, this is talking in futures; for Air Force expansion will be limited by industrial capacity. Moreover, there is often a tendency to assume that if the United States has the power to deliver the atom bomb it has the ability automatically to conclude a war. This does not necessarily follow. The Red army, for example, is the Russians' most formidable weapon as respects western Europe, and it is for the most part well armed and equipped. Strategic bombing might seriously disrupt it, but probably could not destroy it.

Manpower is the element in which the United States and its allies are the weakest. New weapons, superior firepower, tactical use of atomic explosives all would help make up for a deficiency in manpower—although as respects tanks, at least, the Russians seem to be ahead of us. The proposed 60-division defense of western Europe is designed to hold the Russians at the Elbe, and operate from there. But this is a hope for the future.

Whatever kind of expansion takes place, it is apparent that the United States is going to have to make much better use of its military manpower than it has so far. When general mobilization comes, then some of the problem would be solved. Short of general mobilization, the armed forces will have to straighten out and toughen their haphazard attitude about reserves, and they will have to find some way of making use of the superfluity of high ranking reserve officers. They will have to make much more extensive use of women, especially in headquarters jobs. And Congress will have to tighten draft standards by changing physical requirements and age limits and by providing for the draft of younger veterans.

Beyond this the armed forces ought to put all their weight behind a plan for universal service coupled with the present Selective Service. In the immediate future such a plan would produce no more men. But over the long pull it would be the fairest and most comprehensive way of meeting military manpower needs.

Foreign Agents

A statement in an editorial yesterday titled "Foreign Agents" was in part erroneous. Comparing procedures for the registration of the Communist Party under the Voorhis or McCormack Acts and under the McCarran Act, the editorial said: "All that the McCarran Act adds to previous powers, so far as registration of the Communist Party is concerned, is that it enables the Department of Justice to present its case before an administrative tribunal instead of before a court of law and to rely on anonymous informers instead of upon witnesses subject to cross-examination." Although testimony from unidentified sources would be admissible before the Detention Review Board provided for by an another section of the McCarran Act, such testimony would not be admissible before the Subversive Activities Control Board which passes upon registration questions. The SACB is subject to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act. Its proceedings would, however, permit a relaxation of the rules of evidence required by a court of law which seems to us, as we said, disquieting "when it is applied to political freedom."

Attlee's Mission

The problem confronting President Truman and Premier Attlee as they met yesterday was how to deal with Communist China and Soviet Russia, not from a situation of strength but from a situation of weakness. Never can there have been such a swift and dramatic change in the world scene. It has produced a lot of unfortunate speculation on the nature and the extent of the "appeasement" that the conferees will consider. If it was true when Mr. Acheson said it that agreements are tolerable only on the basis of situations of strength, it is just as true today. You simply put a premium on intransigence by aggressors by bargaining from weakness, let alone by yielding to agreement at pistol point. Yet the truest wisdom is attention to realities, and none is more likely to press this axiom than our military. We can imagine them warning the statesmen to recognize the new situation and seek an easement.

The argument will be the one that they used to Secretary Hull in 1941: the need for time—more time. In 1941 Mr. Hull for nine long months strung the Japanese along so that the military could get prepared. What happened? Not only Pearl Harbor, but even more importantly, the evidence at Pearl Harbor that no advantage had been taken of time, even to the extent of putting the Navy and the Army there on speaking terms. The lesson is that time is useful only if you exploit it. As we look back on the period since the negotiation of the North Atlantic Alliance, can we say that we have exploited time either by diplomacy or by defense? The answer is no. Paper committees, a combination of intervention rashness against Communist China and the loss of diplomatic initiative to Soviet Russia, selfishness and sloth among the Allies, slow, hesitant, disunited rearmament, domestic politics—that's the record.

This newspaper has hitherto berated our own lack of will—so much more important than dollars—in carrying out the 20-month-old mandate of Congress to unify the Atlantic defense. The diplomats shied away from the Paul Hoffman campaign for unity, making him tone down his speeches, and insisting that he change his tune from unification to (impostor word!) integration. The result is that today there is less functional unity in western Europe, in spite of the plethora of paper work, than even before the First World War. While our guest is here let us remind him, since plain speaking is in order, of Europe's lag. Since 1939 he has been ejaculating "Federate or perish!" but there has not been the slightest relinquishment of sovereignty even in the vital and primary sphere of military defense. It is shocking that the Allies since Korea have been engaged in bidding up the prices of raw materials against each other, instead of devoting themselves to setting up a pooling system.

No wonder all but the unknowing firebrands want to buy time. The big question is whether there is any more time to buy except on terms that would make us morally and politically unfit for world leadership. This is what is hanging over these conversations. What, however, is clear is that the two statesmen must come to a military and diplomatic recognition of realities in the Far East—on their own, not by bargaining, and certainly not by agreement, with aggressors. At the same time Truman and Attlee must ponder a common action program aimed at reclaiming the diplomatic initiative from the Kremlin which would get us off the wretched spot we are on today. It would be tragic if the present burst of activity were to be concerned with only what is called the need to retreat—and nothing else.

Employe Stockholders

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is justly proud of the fact that its stock is widely distributed among its own employes. But company officials probably have second thoughts about the advantages of encouraging employes to become co-owners of the enterprise after the recent stormy stockholders' meeting called prior to settlement of the strike of Western Electric employes. Several hundred A. T. & T. employes representing unions, some of whose members had refused to cross Western Electric picket lines, were present, and a number of Western Electric strikers also exercised their right as stockholders to attend the meeting. An official of a local union of the Communications Workers of America representing long-distance telephone workers said that the members, though not on strike, sympathized with the strikers. If some of them had crossed picket lines, it was not because they had any regard for management's "phony concept of loyalty and service." Other employe stockholders displayed signs, saying "I protest against the unfair labor practices of my own company," and "I am not interested in dividends sweated out of working people." These interruptions of business brought angry retorts from other stockholders and an exchange of boos and catcalls.

This unexpected result of trying to establish good relations between the company and its employes through stock ownership is rather dismaying. What would happen, for instance, if a company sold so much stock to employes as to put them in a position to dictate wage policies? Probably they would press for higher wages, even if it meant few or no dividends, since the bulk of employe incomes, with few exceptions, comes from wages and salaries. However, as employe stock ownership spreads, more employes will, we believe, become interested in and acquainted with the problems of management. Understanding should breed tolerance and lead to a realization that there is a genuine community of interest between the employer and his employes. Good wages and steady work certainly cannot be insured unless the business flourishes, and the business cannot long remain prosperous if disputes and strikes raise costs, reduce production, and cut profits.

Dilemma In Korea

With Communist troops still pouring into Korea, inevitably the speculation arises whether one purpose of General Collins' trip to Tokyo is to prepare for possible evacuation of United Nations forces. The possibility that this may become necessary must be kept in mind, and plans must be laid before the situation develops into a Dunkirk.

Some military men are still hopeful that the line can be stabilized, perhaps near the thirty-eighth parallel or on a beachhead where our artillery could be brought to bear. One reason for the rapid retreats so far has been to permit U. N. troops to save their equipment and retire to positions of greater strength. General Walker has been conducting a skillful operation in this respect. A situation in which our supply lines are shorter and the enemy's are longer will also lessen our disadvantage.

But no one yet knows the Chinese Communists' intentions. If they are determined to carry out their threat to drive the U. N. forces out of Korea, it is hard to see how General MacArthur could do more than delay them with his present forces. The United States and the United Nations have no large contingents of additional troops available. The Chinese, on the other hand, are reported to have as many as a million men in Korea or along the border, and they are well armed and well trained.

The situation is desperate, and anything that would help stem the Chinese advance must be considered. If the military situation should force a withdrawal, the United Nations would of course have to be a party to the decision. Withdrawal under such circumstances, though it would be a damaging blow to prestige, would not carry the stigma of an abandonment. Korea would be a damaging blow even if done at the behest of the U. N.; without such sanction, it would be devastating.

The horrible dilemma, of course, would be what to do about the South Koreans—people who have fought valiantly by our side and have seen their country twice ravaged, with the imminent prospect of a third wave of destruction. Even if the Korean armies could be evacuated, should the U. N. forces find it necessary to withdraw, those civilians who had aided us would face almost certain liquidation.

On the other hand, the cream of our Army is in Korea. We, and the non-Communist world, could ill afford to lose it or see it hacked to pieces. That would paralyze the ability of the U. N. to meet a threat of aggression elsewhere—and would suit Russian strategy to a T. The decision whether to withdraw will thus have a profound effect upon the future of the world, and it is too early to abandon hope that that such a decision may not be necessary. But we have few trumps, and it is the part of realism to be prepared for the worst while continuing the struggle to prevent it from happening.

Blocking For Crime

Senator Malone's hold-up of the bill to control the interstate shipment of slot machines is a shocking performance that threatens to bring reproach upon the entire Congress. This bill has almost unanimous support in both the Senate and the House, and we surmise that it commands overwhelming indorsement by public opinion. Its passage is the first effective step that Congress can take toward smashing the criminal combinations that are preying upon the country. Yet one benighted obstructionist is apparently preventing Congress from carrying out its will after different versions of the bill have been passed by both Houses.

The Kefauver committee has shown how prevalent is the cancer of crime in many communities, and there is no longer any question about the part the one-armed bandit plays in sustaining this malignant growth. By swelling the incredible wealth of the racketeers, it notably buttresses their political power. Congress cannot permit the privileges of interstate commerce to be used for this purpose without itself contributing to the throttle-hold of crime upon the country. Yet that is precisely what will happen unless Congress shakes off its apathy and meets the Malone filibuster threat head-on.

We do not know what forces are behind Senator Malone's obstructionism. It is the more strange because the bill in question would not prevent the shipment of slot machines to his home State of Nevada—the only State that has specifically legalized the use of slot machines. The center of their manufacture is Chicago. But whatever his motives, Senator Malone's conduct seems to us to be intolerable. Here is a man who was elected to the Senate by fewer than 28,000 votes presuming to obstruct the will of a nation of 150 million inhabitants. His effrontery is so appalling that even if the bill in question were of much less importance than it is, Congress should not let him get away with it.

Formosa Settlement

A careful reading of General Wu's speech of November 28 to the United Nations suggests to me that the Red Chinese and the American position are by no means irreconcilable. The speech further suggests that the Chinese attack in Korea is to a large extent inspired by the Reds' misconception of the American aims in Formosa. If these two concepts have validity then it follows that the key to a peaceful solution of the present Asiatic situation lies in an immediate, thoroughgoing exploration of Formosa policy.

On Formosa there appear to exist two major points on which disagreement or at least misunderstanding exists. One is the matter of timing when the island is to be turned over to its rightful owners. This surely is a factor which lends itself to ready adjustment through negotiation. The second point is to whom the island is to be turned over. The Reds claim American assurances that this is to be China. I do not suppose that there is too much controversy about that in spite of the arguments advanced by certain Republican Senators. The real question is whether Formosa is to be turned over to a China controlled by the Communists.

On this last issue the question is whether America is going to accept the status quo in China or insist on the fiction that the Nationalists still represent the Chinese people. Much as we dislike acknowledging another communistic government this country has long had the policy of accepting the results of revolutions in other countries, notably South American. It is hard to see why we should go to the extent of becomin involved in a war with China in refusing to accept the present Red government there. Recognition of the Reds and their admittance to the United Nations should not be done as an act of surrender to their demands but as a common sense acceptance of the realities.

Loyal Chinese

At the time of Pearl Harbor, I was a student in this country. Because of the crime of possessing an oriental appearance, I was for a time the target of many abuses and insults in public places. Many times I was called to my face a "dirty Jap," etc. Some of the hurt took years to get over.

Since the Chinese Communist attack began in North Korea, the crime of being a Chinese, even in cosmopolitan Washington, is even more obvious. Now, in streetcars and buses, I'm referred to as "yellow barbarian," "ungrateful cur." Yesterday two passengers back of me intended their harangue: "We'll lick these barbarians" for my ear.

I had a brother and cousin fighting in the United States Marines, and I know a lot of other innocent and loyal Chinese also bear the same feeling about such public abuses.

Hospitalized Illness

William P. Thomas, jr., (letter published, November 27), voices the impatience of taxpayers overwhelmed by bankrupting burdens of health hazards: Why not low cost health insurance against time-losing illness treated at home?

Mr. Thomas has placed a finger on the toughest challenge facing health security insurance. We can solve it if we insist that essential health needs have top priority. Each year about 10 percent of us face hospitalized illness. This unfortunate 10 percent is burdened with about 50 percent of the total costs of medical care. The other 50 percent, including illness at home, is the easier burden of the more fortunate 90 percent.

Hospitalized illness lends itself to fairly accurate actuarial analysis. We can calculate a solvent equation between risk-sharing premiums and adequate health services. Once we have the mathematics on solvent insurance for childbearing, malignant disease and catastrophic illness we can enlarge health security coverage.

Title to insurance benefits for illness treated at home will be most difficult to define. Chiseling doctors and neurotic patients could break the bank. Unmeasurable risks and incalculable benefits make a solvent insurance equation impossible. With a solvent experience insuring hospitalized illness we can progress to less urgent needs.

Hager Report

Some time ago Dr. Walter C. Hager, president of Wilson Teachers College, made the suggestion that his college and Miner Teachers College be merged in the interests of economy and efficiency.

We regard this as a valuable and prudent suggestion, fully in keeping with the basic tenets of democracy, of mutual advantage to both institutions, and as a forward step in keeping with the ideals and practices of intercultural education. We believe the Board of Education should give serious and early consideration to Dr. Hager's report.

Tibet's Status

In your November 23 issue, one of your correspondents advances the theory that Tibet is now a part of China, since it was conquered by Kublai Khan about 700 years ago.

As the same is true of Persia, northern India, and most of Russia, it would appear by the same method of reasoning that these countries also would be under Chinese dominion.

However, Kublai Khan was not a Chinese and the first country that he conquered was China itself; so that what this argument proves (if it proves anything, which I think no student of logic would be ready to concede) is that all these territories should be now under the dominion of Mongolia.

The fact that Tibet has at various times in the past conquered and occupied considerable parts of China and that it has asserted and maintained its independence since 1912 are not apparently to be taken into account at all.

Women Judges

In your issue November 30, Drew Pearson states that Mrs. India Edwards, women's director of the Democratic National Committee boldly said to President Truman, "It's a disgrace there aren't more women on the bench. Why, women make wonderful judges. They are fair, interested in justice and have more common sense than men." It is not reported what President Truman answered to this, but I imagine that he would like to have said, "Why don't you drop dead!"

A woman with the influence which Mrs. Edwards is said to wield should never make statements which she can not possibly prove and it is my considered opinion that she could not prove this one.

Reactions To Communist Aggression

MacArthur must be given immediate United Nations authority to bomb the bases of Chinese power in Manchuria and the concentration of reinforcements across the Yalu River. We are fighting a desperate war with one hand tied behind our back and with our feet hobbled.

The timid members of the Western bloc must be made to see that there will be no end to Communist aggression unless the United Nations stands like a rock on its demand that Communist forces withdraw from Korea at once—or face atomic attack on the great troop and industrial concentrations in Manchuria. L. R. K.
Washington.

Would dropping atomic bombs anywhere in China bring the war in Korea to a successful end? Or would there still be plenty of Chinese left alive and plenty of war material coming out of Russia for them to use?

If we really want to win, wouldn't letting MacArthur do what he wants in the way of bombing supply bases be wiser than risking the atomic bomb? And how about letting Chiang enlist the aid of the millions of Chinese who do not like Communist-Moscow domination and Communist dictatorship? DON. W. RHOADES.
Blair, Nebr.

Recruit the hundred best minds in America to prepare and submit a lofty but simple statement of the American purposes. Select the best and make official announcement of our commitment to it. Drop copies suitably translated and appropriately printed over the cities of China, Russia and other Communist peoples. The inference would be—ideas for peace now but bombs soon, if war persists. JOHN HARKRIDER.
New York.

The only real hope lies in changing the methods by which we would achieve the same end that we have had before us always. The Western method does not apply in the Far East. We have to use a Far Eastern method. It is the method of bargaining in diplomatic and political terms. Anyone acquainted with Far Eastern peoples knows that skill in this field is esteemed. Success in drawing a bargain which is for the good of all, regardless of how long it takes and how many steps backward and forward are involved, is considered a real art.

Diplomatic success in halting war in bringing about agreements between the nations involved would cut at the very roots of communism.

GRACE S. YAUKEY.

It should be apparent what the Russian tactics are in their attempt for world conquest toward communism: (1) the spreading out, as far as possible, of United Nations armed might; (2) the prolongation of the supply lines of our armed forces; (3) when everything is as they want it, for them to strike at the most vulnerable point, which right now could be Vienna, Berlin, Greece, Turkey, India or Iran.

I suggest that the following actions be undertaken immediately: (1) universal military training for all young men from the age of 18 up; (2) the calling of all, nonmedically discharged veterans, officers and enlisted men alike to active duty; (3) full speed ahead in all types of production for war materials. Gloom Over Korean Vise

By Marquis Childs

Could Nehru Help?

AS THE Korean tragedy unfolds, it becomes apparent that the political vise in which the United States is caught is almost as rigid as the military one. The next few days will determine how much can be salvaged politically and diplomatically as well as militarily.

What western European diplomats are saying privately is far more explosive than what they are saying publicly or even than the criticism contained in the press of their respective countries. In essence it comes down to this:

The United States must make efforts going much further than any that have yet been indicated to avoid the disaster of an impossible and endless war on the Chinese mainland with millions of Chinese soldiers trained and experienced in guerilla warfare and moved by a fierce fanaticism. If such a war results from the present debacle, then all hope of saving western Europe will be ended.

The degree of maneuverability left in the United Nations is small. It is highly doubtful that western European nations would support a Korean resolution stronger than that vetoed in the Security Council by Soviet Russia. And that resolution, calling on the Communist Chinese to withdraw, is now more or less meaningless.

The first reaction of many delegates to the violent and envenomed attack delivered by Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, head of the Red delegation, was one of almost fatalistic hopelessness. It seemed to shut the door on all Western cooperation, offering a choice between getting out of Asia entirely or fighting endlessly against terrible odds.

EVEN the Indian delegation is said to have reacted in the first instance with the belief that all hope in negotiation was over. Those long accustomed to U. N. venom were startled by the vitriolic nature of the hatred which Wu sprayed at his audience.

Over the weekend a faint flicker of hope has revived. In part, it comes out of the talk which Wu had with Sir Benegal Rau, head of the Indian delegation. In the course of that talk, which was friendly and polite on the surface at least, Wu intimated that nothing could be expected so long as Communist China was outside the U. N.

This is indeed a faint ray of light in a very dark sky. How Communist China could be admitted in view of what has happened is hard to see. Yet the fact remains that in view of the military situation, America's bargaining position is far from strong.

One thing this slight hope suggests is the need to use every avenue of mediation. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru should be invited at once to come to Washington to participate in the talks with President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee. I feel certain he would respond to such an invitation by flying here as quickly as possible.

By his counsel and his presence, Nehru would contribute to a settlement if settlement is still possible. Too often in the past the Indians have not been consulted on major policy decisions directly affecting Asia. And our Ambassador in New Delhi, Loy Henderson, has several times been embarrassed to discover that the British had confided in Nehru an issue previously referred to London.

AS TO the military vise, the only resource not yet tried is to bomb across the North Korean border in Manchuria. It is technically correct to say that General MacArthur never formally requested permission to attack in Manchuria prior to the final and fateful offensive intended to take the last area of North Korea up to the border, but in his telegrams to the Pentagon he plainly implied that if he could not bomb Manchurian concentrations, he would find it difficult to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

If it is now true that there are 600,000 Chinese in Korea, then the time for bombing in Manchuria may have passed. Bombings would now be concentrated on the immediate threat U. N. armies face from Red troops actually in Korea. But whether bombing can be effective against the kind of mass infiltration practiced by the Chinese, with their limited supply lines, is doubtful, and this doubt applies also to the tactical use of the atom bomb.

What President Truman said about the popularity of generals when they are winning battles and the decline in their fortunes when they are losing is a sobering truth. Yet after this has been said, it is necessary to consider certain failures and, above all, the failure of intelligence in Korea.

Many people in Washington, including several European diplomats, know of the over-all intelligence report on Korea prepared by the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA report took a very grim foreboding view of the numbers and the intention of the Communist Chinese in Korea. Completed on November 21, it was available to MacArthur's staff before the offensive was launched.

At the very least, the proper committees of Congress are entitled to know whether this report was considered and, if it was considered, why the information it contained was ignored. For the rest, there is faith and prayer in one of the darkest hours in our history.

Bombs For Britain

Without further hesitancy, Mr. Truman should let Mr. Attlee have a few atom bombs to be kept at strategic points in Britain in case of an all-out Red attack. There is no time to lose, and we must prepare ourselves for the worst.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The October 18 Warning

FOR THE reasons which I described in yesterday's article the controlling condition of German rearmament—as fixed by the German leaders who would have to recruit the German troops—is a large and irrevocable commitment of American troops. The Germans insist that a substantial German contribution cannot be had merely by making concessions about political equality and by providing subsidies to pay for the army.

Lippmann

IT CAN be had, if at all, only by an all-out American strategic commitment not only to defend western Europe but to liberate eastern Europe. Equality, they feel, rightly enough, is self-evident if they are to be our allies. The American subsidies they take for granted. But whatever the formula which a German government may subscribe to, the reality of the German military effort, its sincerity and its effectiveness, will be governed by the judgment of the Germans as to the sincerity and the effectiveness of our military effort—not in general—but inside Europe.

The German judgment will be rendered by the demobilized German veterans. They know exactly what a war with Russia would be like. They feel that they can appraise with a professional eye the chances of success. They already have clear views about the quantity and the military quality of the armies of occupation in Germany. "We receive reports constantly at our party headquarters," one politician told me, "about the occupation forces, about their equipment, their training, their discipline, their commanders. The reports are made by former German soldiers."

ALL THIS was only too clear a month ago when the triumphant landing at Inchon allowed them to suppose that the statesmen knew how to end the Korean war,—and that therefore the American army could be disengaged in order to become the nucleus, trained and tested in battle, of a bigger army. Even in those more cheerful days the gap was wide between the British-American and the German approach to rearmament. It was so wide that I could not understand, and no one has since explained to me, why we chose to bring on a public dispute with the French before we had anything like a firm knowledge of how the Germans could be recruited, and under what conditions they would rearm for war.

Now that our military position in Asia is so much worse than it was then, the difficulties of our European policy are bound to be greater. In fact the American policy will have to be reexamined in the face of the fact—now self-evident one may suppose to everyone—that we are facing the consequences of overextending our commitments. We have come into the multiplying troubles which nations suffer when in the determination of great policies they pay more attention to an immediate popularity at home than to a prudent estimate of the national resources in relation to their engagements abroad.

THE reexamination is now unavoidable. If it is to be successful in the sense that it leads to a stabilization in the Pacific and to a pacification in Europe, it will have to begin, I believe, with Secretary Acheson's formula for the conduct of foreign affairs: that it is possible to negotiate only from equal and preferably from superior military strength.

The trouble with this theory is that a resort to diplomacy is never so absolutely essential as when a nation does not have equal or superior military strength. Now the Western world is hopelessly outnumbered in Asia, it is outnumbered and it is disarmed in Europe. In these circumstances it is a catastrophic error to suspend diplomacy, and to teach people to feel dishonored by diplomacy, on the theory that the race of armaments must first be won. The truth is that the race of armaments can never be won or even tied unless the diplomacy of the West can compensate for its military inferiority.

APPLIED to Germany, which is now disarmed, the Acheson theory rests on the strange notion that the Russians and the Poles, who have enormous armies, will not reinforce the armies they already have between the Vistula and the Elbe; that we can build up German divisions, starting from scratch, faster than the Russians and the Poles can move into Germany, divisions that already exist.

In a recent speech General Bradley said that we favor "allowing" a "contribution" of "the production, resources, and manpower of Germany" . . . to "defend the line of the Elbe." But in fact the line of the Elbe has to be defended if the disarmed Germans are to be able to rearm. Western Germany has to become, in General MacArthur's vivid phrase, "a privileged sanctuary" into which the Red army will not enter.

There is no justification whatever,—it is the most wishful kind of thinking—to suppose that the Russians will be obliging enough to wait until we have created in Germany such a situation of strength that Mr. Acheson would feel he might be able to use diplomacy.

THERE is no need to guess. We have been told quite formally by the Soviet government that it will not wait. The warning was as explicit and it was more direct than that which the Chinese Foreign Minister delivered through the Indian Ambassador in Peiping about what would happen if we crossed the thirty-eighth parallel.

On October 18 the Soviet government sent a note to the three Western governments which, in the Tass version, says that the USSR "will not tolerate such measures of the United States, British, and French governments aimed at reviving the German regular army in West Germany." That is strong language. It is well to remember in reading it that while the list of promises which the Russians have broken is a long one, rarely if ever have they failed to carry out a threat which engaged the Soviet government explicitly and directly.

The note of October 18 is ostensibly an answer to the Allied note of May 23. Thus it was under consideration for nearly five months. The timing of this note may be accidental. But it would be rash to think so. The Soviet warning about German rearmament was delivered 10 days after American troops crossed the thirty-eighth parallel in Korea, and two days after the first Chinese units crossed the Yalu River. Thus the Soviet warning was delivered with full knowledge in Moscow that the main ground forces of the United States would now be pinned down on the other side of the world. How the Russians will implement their threat that they will not "tolerate" German rearmament I do not know. But it would be an unforgivable omission if the three Western governments did not engage the Russians deeply and patiently and persistently in diplomatic discussion on the subject of German rearmament in the West and in the East.

Correction

Through a typographical error a not was omitted from one sentence toward the end of Walter Lippmann's article which appeared yesterday. The correct sentence should have read: "The French insistence that German troops shall have no autonomy stems not from the fear that a German army would march against Paris; it stems from an accurate and contemporary realization that a German army would wish to march, and to drag along with it all the rest of it, against Koenigsberg and Warsaw."

on added punch as an election aftermath. Kefauver committee probing in Cook County, Illinois, mainly striking at a Democratic candidate for sheriff, Dan Gilbert, was regarded by both parties as a major factor contributing to Lucas' defeat.

Those for whom warrants were sought in a resolution unanimously indorsed by the Kefauver committee were:

Antony "Tony" Accardo, River Forest, Ill.

Ben Marden, New York City.

John Patton, Burnham Park, Ill., and Earl Park, Ind.

Elmer (Bones) Remer, Piedmont, Calif.

Morris Rosen, New York City.

Joseph Sica, Los Angeles.

The request for warrants was embodied in a report to the Senate in which the committee said failure to find the 11 is obstructing its investigation of gambling and organized crime.

The committee asked authority to fix bonds as high as $25,000 for anyone arrested to guarantee his appearance later.

In a formal statement the committee said Accardo has the reputation of having succeeded to the mantle of Al Capone in underworld activities.

The statement added:

"The committee has information that shortly before the murder of James A. Ragen in Chicago in 1946, at the time when Chicago racketeers are said to have been attempting to take over Ragen's racing news wire service, Accardo sought meetings with Ragen on five occasions."

The committee said Burns is sought for questioning in connection with a racing news wire service it contends he operated in 1946 and 1947.

The report stated:

"Humphreys, who has a record as a racketeer in Chicago going back over many years, is reputed to have been associated with Accardo in the attempt to take over Ragen's racing news service."

the United States to win so long as Russia loses. And some people want the United States to win so long as Roosevelt loses."

I think we must avoid too much personal leadership—my good friend Winston Churchill has suffered a little from this. It must grow more slowly—remembering always that we have only been in the war for three months.

But you are dead right about more enthusiasm and I am starting on that line. I do hope to see you one of these days soon.

Russell C. Leffingwell, partner and later chairman of J. P. Morgan & Co., wrote that it was necessary to rouse people from apathy and passiveness. He warned that a defensive psychology easily lent itself to defeatism. In his opinion F.D.R. alone could change such a psychology, and he could do this by speaking more frequently on the radio.

F.D.R. to Henry H. Arnold

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 25, 1942

Memorandum for General Arnold:

This is the most magnificent record of any officer of the United States Army from Washington on down to date. I think that we should give Col. Robert R. McCormick the next higher title than Field Marshal—I do not remember what that would be but I think it would be unique in military annals.

If you can find someone with nothing better to do, have him verify McCormick's claims of having introduced the R.O.T.C. into the schools, machineguns into the Army, mechanization of the Army, automatic rifles for the Army, and the allegation that he was the first ground officer to introduce observation of artillery fire from the air. I personally can take care of the other allegations.

I think he must be a little touched in the head but this letter of his might be given credence 100 years from now if we did not produce the antidote at this time. F.D.R.

F.D.R. had been shown a copy of a letter written by Colonel McCormick to a former employe, in which extravagant military innovations were claimed. The "other allegations" at the end of the second paragraph related to the Chicago publisher's announcement that he had been the first to advocate an alliance with Canada, and that he had forced acquisition of bases in the Atlantic.

Concerning Colonel McCormick's claims as a military innovator, it was reported to F.D.R. that:

Question—Who introduced R. O.T.C. into the schools?

Answer—The act of Congress, approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, established for the United States the system of military education in the schools and colleges, known today as R.O.T.C. A military man by the name of Capt. Alden Partridge had the idea first.

Question—Who introduced machineguns into the Army? Was it "Gatling Gun" Parker or Colonel McCormick?

Answer—Neither "Gatling Gun" Parker nor Colonel McCormick. Credit for the manual type should be given to Maj. Gen. H. G. Wright who made the original recommendation on this gun on March 11, 1863. Credit for the automatic type may be given to John Browning who invented the gun about 1895.

Answer—Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss in 1911.

Answer—It was invented in 1916 by John Browning and adopted by a board of officers for the Army.

Question—Am I right in stating that the first observation of artillery fire was conducted by the then Second Lieut. H. H. Arnold and Second Lieut. T. D. Milling at Fort Riley, Kans., in October and November, 1912?

Answer—Second Lieut. H. H. Arnold made the first observation from an airplane of a battery actually firing at a target on November 5, 1912, at Fort Riley, Kans.

F.D.R. to George H. Gallup in New York

THE WHITE HOUSE,
October 2, 1942

Dear Dr. Gallup:

I have been much interested in the confidential report you sent to me. As you know, I feel that the majority of your reports are of definite value.

Of course, in some cases I realize how difficult it is to frame the question, but on this problem your average is very high.

I am particularly interested in the indications that the people seem to understand and approve the necessity of pursuing the course that will prevent a further effort on the part of the German peoples to continue their struggle for world domination, even though they are thoroughly beaten in this war.

I am a bit appalled by the percentage of people who have no clear idea of what the war is about. I am inclined to think that this group includes a large proportion of those who were referred to by a radio commentator some months ago when he said, "There are three groups in this country who say they want to win the war (a) if, at the same time, Russia is defeated (b), if, at the same time, Roosevelt is defeated (c) if, at the same time, England is defeated."

I am just back from a trip around the country and though I have not seen crowds or made speeches, I am inclined to think that there is probably less realization of the actual war effort and war aims in Washington, D. C., than anywhere else.

Very sincerely yours,

F.D.R. to Morris L. Ernst

THE WHITE HOUSE,
October 6, 1942.

Memorandum for Morris Ernst:

I am moving on the Italian matter in a slightly different way, but with the same objective.

Glad you are working on that silly attack on Nelson.

In regard to Joe Patterson, I would not try to exhort him, explain to him, or argue with him. I would rather use the technique of getting him to talk, of drawing him out, making him be specific and of intimating to him that he ought not either to believe or to print the many things which are simply not facts. I would raise the question as to whether freedom of the press is not essentially freedom to print correct news and freedom to criticize the news on the basis of factual truth. I think there is a big distinction between this and freedom to print untrue news. For example, John O'Donnell, one of his cronies, has, within my recollection of several years, never yet sent in a news story which was factually true throughout.

F.D.R.

The "Italian matter" was a suggestion by Ernst that Italy be declared "occupied territory," with the result that Italian aliens in this country, who numbered over half a million, could then be treated like the Czechs. Ernst believed that such a shift in attitude here would have immensely useful repercussions in Italy.

The reference to Donald Nelson grew out of a current press drive to get him out as head of W. P. B. Ernst was arranging meetings between Nelson and influential newspaper people.

The final paragraph related to Ernst's correspondence with Captain Joseph M. Patterson, the publisher of the strongly isolationist, strongly anti-New Deal New York Daily News. Ernst hoped to persuade Patterson to adopt a more reasonable attitude.

F.D.R. to Mrs. Roosevelt

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 7, 1942

Memorandum for E. R.:

In view of the new income tax law, it will, of course, result in such a cut in the net I receive from the Government that we shall have to take some steps to reduce the White House food bill, to which I pay $2,000 a month, or $24,000 a year. Next year the taxes on $75,000 will leave me only about $30,000 net and SOMETHING HAS TO BE DONE! I do not think I can contribute more than $1500 a month—leaving a total of $18,000 for Mrs. Nesbit for the year.

The only thing I can think of is to reduce the number of servants whom we feed. Because they have a Civil Service status we should, of course, see that they get employment elsewhere in the Government. We must remember, too, that I am away on an average of about ten days out of each month, not counting the more extended trips like the last, whicl. I take at least once a year. When you are away my entertaining very rarely amounts to more than a dinner party of four or five people.

I do realize that the cost of food has gone up. However, I would suggest that something drastic be done about the size of the portions served.

For instance, for my luncheons I have pleaded—when it is an egg dish—for only one egg apiece, yet four eggs for two people constantly appear. In the same way in the evenings, vegetables and meat keep coming in to the study when night after night more than half of the dish goes back to the pantry. I know of no instance where anybody has taken a second help—except occasionally when I do—and it would be much better if I did not take a second help anyway.

Memorandum to General Marshall:

I think that for many reasons Mr. Willkie should take this trip—especially to put some pep into the officials of Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Irak, Iran and China. I do no know what capacity he should go in—perhaps as a special representative of the President.

What do you think?

F. D. R.

Willkie's final itinerary included the Soviet Union as well as the countries mentioned in the memo. Out of the trip came Willkie's famous book "One World," which helped educate the country to understand America's position in world affairs.

F.D.R. to Wendell L. Willkie (Telegram.)

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 2, 1942

Am arranging for you to leave any day after August fifteenth agreeeable to you and to return between first and fifteenth of October. It is my thought that you could do the Middle East and that Russia and China could be subject to developments which you and I can talk over. General Marshall and General Arnold will have details. I hope you can come to see me at your earliest convenience so that we can have a good talk in regard to it and in regard to a lot of other things. Call Secretary McIntyre and he will arrange a day and an hour.

One On the Aisle

It Saounds Odd, But Oh Shore

By Richard L. Coe

THOUGH ONE OF Shaw's more recent comedies—it's only 36 years old—"Pygmalion" remains one of the wittiest in our tongue. And the new production of Arena Stage reminds you that his tea party scene for Act II is one of the merriest pranks ever.

This is the one in which Eliza Doolittle, the Cockney flower girl transformed into a proper-spoken young lady, regales her tutor's guests with shattering smalltalk. At least, in her naive way she assumes the primly enunciated horrors she mouths are smalltalk.

It is a scene beautifully adapted to arena staging, that entertaining exercise in theatrical simplicity which gradually is winning an increasing circle of friends in our live theater outpost.

Another aspect of Shaw's 1914 skill is evident in his ending. Despite the ideas you may have constructed from the movie Wendy Hiller played so brilliantly, the playwright didn't descend to winding up his tale of middle class morality. He carefully avoided the slightest touch of romance in his dry professor and when it came to preparing the film he protected his hero still more by inserting a scene which made it clear that Eliza Doolittle would marry Freddie, that hazy brother of her professor's friends. That the film makers left out that touch and ended the tale on the trite note film-makers feel their audiences demand astounded Shaw's friends. Seeing the play now, as it was first performed, is a handy reminder, if one ever needed such, of Shaw's dramatic skill.

For all the current production's success with its first night audience, I can't go on record as an admirer. For the verbal delights of "Pygmalion" rely on accents and phonetics and it would be expecting the impossible to find a reasonably inexperienced group of professionals who could begin to cope with the all-important accents and tones.

This need not be taken as a blockbuster on our energetic players, for the latest Broadway revival with Gertrude Lawrence as Eliza is all too recent an example. The glamorous Gertrude didn't get to first base as the Cockney and her tea party scene was too self-conscious to be borne. Zelda Fichandler now displays the intelligence for the role, but lacks the techniques it demands, which means that watching her unable to do what her brain orders is more frustrating than fascinating.

Henry Oliver, as the dustman-father who finds middle class respectability so confining, is the most effective member of the cast; he doesn't belabor the accent business and he underplays with evident belief that every seat is a best seat."

Lester Rawlins is the professor and while he gets across the dry, nonromantic aspect, he works far too hard at it. Jane Plummer Rice, a late replacement in the cast, is efficient and Warner Schreiner, the professor's friend, has seen far too many Hollywood versions of the stately homes of England.

Miss Fichandler doubles as co-director with Edward Mangum and together they have staged the comedy smoothly.

Considering that British accents are the butt of Shaw's humor, it seems to me, though, that Arena Stage has walked into trouble with its mouth open. The sounds are pretty grim, but Shaw's ideas are swell.

"PYGMALION" Arena State presents the comedy in three acts by George Bernard Shaw. Lighting by Leo Gallenstein. Technical decor by Vera Mowry. Directed by Edward Mangum and Zelda Fichlander. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. In the old Hippodrome Theater, Ninth and N. Y. ave. through December 16.

Patent Office Irks High Court Because of Gadget-Passing

A unanimous opinion in which Justice Robert H. Jackson spoke for all nine justices threw out a patent on a frame used at grocery store check-out counters to pull the groceries up to the supermarket clerk.

Then Justice William O. Douglas, speaking for himself and Justice Hugo L. Black, blasted the Patent Office in a concurring opinion. Said Douglas:

"The Constitution never sanctioned the patenting of gadgets. Patents serve a higher end—the advancement of science. A patent need not be as startling as an atomic bomb to be patentable. But it has to be of such quality and disinction that masters of the scientific field in which it falls will recognize it as an advance."

Then Douglas said that the Patent Office, "like most administrative agencies, has looked with favor on the opportunity which the exercise of discretion affords to expand its own jurisdiction. And so it has placed a host of gadgets under the armor of patents—gadgets that obviously have had no place in the constitutional scheme of advancing scientific knowledge."

Douglas then listed some samples: doorknobs of clay rather than wood when previous differently shaped doorknobs had been of clay; rubber tips on pencils for erasers; a method for freezing fish in containers operating like ice cream freezers; a revolving cue rack; elastic gussets in corsets; a shirt bosom or dickie sewn onto the front of a shirt; applying the principle of the umbrella to a skirt form.

Douglas said it is not enough that an article be "new and useful." To be patentable, it must also "serve the ends of science—and help to push back the frontiers of chemistry, physics, and the like . . ."

Winner in the current case was the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. The A & P was being sued by Supermarket Equipment Corp.

In other actions, the Supreme Court:

1. Unanimously decided against a veteran who discovered that forgetful Army surgeons had left a big towel in his abdomen after an operation. He was trying to sue the Government for $100,000 damages. The veteran, Arthur K. Jefferson of Joppa, Md., now draws a $171 monthly total disability pension.

Justice Jackson's opinion concluded that the Federal Tort Claims Act does not cover claims filed by military personnel as a result of military service. Two other appeals also were turned down unanimously on the same grounds.

2. Refused to consider a plea to upset a Baltimore streetcar and bus fare rise. The increase, now in effect, raised the fare from 13 cents cash to 15 cents. Baltimore and the Maryland Public Service Commission had sought the high court review.

3. Refused to grant a hearing to August J. Klapprott, former German-American Bund leader, whose citizenship was revoked in 1942 on the Government's claim that his oath renouncing allegiance to Germany was false.

Body Found in 2 Suitcases

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP).—The dismembered body of a woman was found today crammed into two bloody suitcases checked in a public locker room of a Long Island Railroad station in Brooklyn.

The grisly discovery of the first suitcase was made by Raymond B. Smith, baggageman at the Atlantic ave. station.

Smith said he began inspecting the contents of all lockers in the station's lower level when he detected a peculiar odor.

Inside locker 216, he found a 30-by-15 imitation black leather suitcase into which were crammed the head and torso of the chestnut-haired woman and two arms, severed at the elbows.

Police said the woman appeared to have been between 30 and 40 years old and weighed about 130 pounds. The parts were badly decomposed and the tongue was out of the mouth, indicating possible strangulation.

A quick police search of the other lockers revealed the second macabre suitcase, a brown bag containing the pelvis, both thighs and the woman's legs. This was in adjoining locker 220.

Flood Peril Seen in Storms Sweeping U. S.

By The Associated Press

The weather hit the East and Western States Monday with a quick repeat performance of floods, heavy snow and gales.

The storms followed a similar, but less destructive, pattern of those which claimed 297 lives and caused more than a hundred million dollars in damage late last month.

Flood waters were in the rampage in California, Nevada, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia and Pennsylvania. Some 5000 persons already were homeless.

At least five traffic deaths were attributed to the new California storms.

Gales pounded the East coast. Storm warnings were posted from the Delaware breakwater to Eastport, Maine.

An intense storm sweeping north through Virginia, began dumping a new thick blanket of snow across eastern areas that were buried under record snowfall a little less than a week ago.

As the storm picked up headway, Western Maryland reported four inches, West Virginia had up to eight inches, Virginia had snow west of the Blue Ridge mountains, and central New York had a heavy fall.

The Weather Bureau, in a special bulletin, said the storm could cause from five to 10 inches of snow in central Pennsylvania and in central and eastern New York except for the coast of New York where it was expected to be in the form of rain.

THIS WHISKY IS SIX YEARS OLD—86.8 PROOF. SEAGRAM-DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK, N. Y.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

AT ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., where the baseball people are convening this week, Bucky Harris' quest for a shortstop will reach the talking stage. The conversation will be directed chiefly at the Boston Red Sox, who are long on infielders, short on pitchers and in a listening mood.

Johnny Pesky is the man the Nats want, although the Red Sox may try to appease them by offering Vernon Stephens on whom they have cooled. Harris would not reject Stephens, but he would scale down the offer he is prepared to make for Pesky.

POVICH

The fellow the Red Sox want is Sid Hudson, who is merely the best pitcher on Harris' staff. Ordinarily a club might recoil at that sort of a demand, but Harris is privately entertaining the notion that he might go for a Hudson-for-Pesky trade.

He won't give up Hudson for Stephens, though. Aside from Hudson, Harris is going into the trading sessions empty-handed in the way of trading material, and Hudson must bring the kind of solid swap that would permit the Nats to give him up. That means Pesky, whom Harris envisions as the answer to his infield problem.

WITH THE RED SOX, the Nats are in a splendid bargaining position. For three straight years, the Boston club has blown pennants for lack of pitching depth. A Hudson who could win 14 games with the Nats last season, easily stacks up as a 20-game winner for such as the Red Sox, who have to unload a superfluous shortstop anyway.

Boston Manager Steve O'Neill has already said that Lou Boudreau would be a regular with the team. That leaves no place for Stephens at shortstop, and he has never played any other position. They can't carry both Stephens and Pesky. In their futile pennant drive last season, the Red Sox benched Pesky and replaced him with Billy Goodman who can play third base plus leading the league in hitting.

Harris is counting on the fact, too, that the Red Sox are reluctant to deal off one of their infielders to any first division club. Understandably they don't want to strengthen any team that might beat them out of the pennant. By the same token, they would have few qualms in that direction when trading with the fifth-place Nats.

HARRIS' PREFERENCE for Pesky over Stephens is two-pronged. He rates Pesky a better shortstop, and also a better hitter despite Stephens' power swatting. Unlike Pesky, who sprays his hits, Stephens is handicapped by Griffith's Stadium's remote distances to the fences. Significant is the fact that of the 178 major league home runs Stephens has powered, only one occurred in Griffith Stadium, and that one off a rookie pitcher named Scott Carey, and inside-the-park.

Trade talk won't be the only topic at St. Pete, however. The major leagues will take up the matter of Commissioner Chandler's new seven-year contract, and vote him one unanimously. Fred Saigh, owner of the Cardinals, who is Chandler's only opposition, can't muster the five votes to defeat him and will doubtless be polite enough to make it a unanimous approval.

The club owners will also be talking about radio and television, what with the minors screaming that their 17 percent loss in attendance was due chiefly to local interest being blacked out by the broadcasts and telecasts of major league games. The big league clubs are divided on the issue themselves.

THE MINOR LEAGUES' quarrel is not with them, say the big league club owners, but with the Justice Department, which ordered the majors to take off the restrictions on their broadcasts under penalty of being declared a monopoly. The majors followed orders, and the minors howled that their fans were surfeited with baseball after hearing the big league broadcasts, and ignored their local teams.

Meanwhile, the two big leagues have ordered their clubs to make no more radio or television commitments until after some concerted action is taken at St. Petersburg that might appease both the minor leagues and the Justice Department. Existing contracts will be respected, but new ones are kaput temporarily. The Government's ruling, it is felt, created more new ills than there were old ones it was supposed to correct.

George M. Trautman, commissioner of the minor leagues, foresees ruin for his domain if the broadcasts of big league games continue indiscriminately with 2000 stations beaming them at minor league fans. "Minor league baseball can't survive in direct competition with the majors," he states. "They are dinning us out of business."

Out to Tie for Title

Browns Have Incentive to Run Up Score on Redskins Sunday

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Cleveland Browns have enough incentive to beat the Redskins 73-0 at Griffith Stadium Sunday.

First of all, they've got to win to guarantee themselves at least a tie for the divisional championship.

Secondly, they'll be out to avenge the puny 20-14 licking they gave the Redskins in Cleveland two weeks ago when they were doped to win by 20 points.

Thirdly, the Browns know that the "senior" NFL teams resent the success they've enjoyed in their first year in the league. And the Clevelanders are out to pile up the biggest scores they can against the NFL's old-time members.

One Cleveland official suspects that the veteran NFL members are plotting against the Browns to the extent of giving each other motion pictures of theeir games with the Browns. This is strictly against NFL laws.

Then, a recent statement attributed to Coach Greasy Neale, whose Eagles have been dumped twice by the Browns, that if the Eagles couldn't win the championship he'd like to see the Giants do it. The Giants are currently tied with the Browns for the lead. They play the Eagles Sunday.

Another reason Coach Paul Brown's four-time AAC champs would like to pour it on the Redskins is George Marshall, president of the Redskins. The original voice of the Redskins once said the Browns, who were then in the now-defunct AAC, couldn't lick a single team in the National League.

Lastly, the Browns have been chided by the Redskins for vetoing their request to play Tommy Mont when Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer were injured at the same time.

With these grievances in mind, the Browns can't help but being all fired up for their first invasion of Griffith Stadium. But they're smart enough to know that spirit alone isn't going to beat the Redskins, who should have plenty of the old zipperoo themselves Sunday what with a chance to knock a team out of the title.

Tim Temerario, who's scouted the Redskins for the Browns this year, saw Coach Herman Ball's gang club the Steelers, 24-7, in Pittsburgh Sunday.

"You guys made my job a lot easier when you beat the Steelers out there today," Tim told Ball after the game. "I've been trying to tell our gang that you're no pushover despite your record. Now maybe they'll believe me."

Ball, buoyed by the team's longest winning streak of the year—two in a row—was as confident as the rest of the Redskins that the locals will conk the Browns.

"We'll beat their pants off," Ball said. "And without Mont, he added.

Dynamite Wins Decision Over Cooper

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Little Dynamite blew up all over Jimmy Cooper last night before 842 fight fans at Turner's Arena to win a unanimous ten round decision and the District featherweight championship.

The fight was won in the first three rounds when Dynamite backed Cooper up into a corner and slugged him with smashing lefts and rights. From then on it was no contest. Dynamite gave Cooper a terrific beating.

Cooper was never knocked down but in the seventh and eight he was groggy. He fought back with courage and kept Dynamite from knocking him out.

The fight was the main event of a card celebrating the 15th anniversary of boxing at Turner's Arena.

In the preliminaries, welterweight Bill Hickerson decisioned Kid Stone in four rounds, Gene Harley won a decision over welterweight George Brooks in five rounds, Bernie Barksdale scored a TKO over lightweight Kenny Leach in 2 minutes and 59 seconds of the fourth round, and Coffey Wilkinson won a TKO over featherweight Manuel Battista in the second round.

Fort Meade Wins

Johnny Sthoer's 19 points led Fort Meade to a 47-43 basketball victory over Bolling Air Base at Meade last night.

Furr Slips, Silas Holds Him to Draw in Reunion

A remarkable reunion was held last night at Turner's Arena in a celebration marking the fifteenth anniversary of boxing at the club.

Phil Furr and Sid Silas, who fought the first main event in the arena for the District welterweight title back in 1935, "fought" a three-round exhibition to a draw.

Both fighters are in prime condition despite the passage of the years. Also back were Denny Hughes, a local attorney, who refereed the first fight, Referee Ray Bowen, then a handler, and Billy Edwards, still a fight handler, handled the boxers. Jimmy Lake, who announced the original fight, handled the vocal chores.

Admiral Calls off Navy Classes

Dave Bannerman Pleads for Return of Souvenir Jersey

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Hoarse but happy midshipmen, still celebrating their football victory over Army, skipped classes with the blessing of the Admiral this afternoon.

Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, Academy Superintendent, ordered liberty for everyone—even plebes—at a special rally in the Armory this noon. They didn't have to fall in line again until 7 p.m.

Calling off classes is something unheard of at Annapolis. But nobody was paying attention to business, including the exuberant Admiral, during the morning academic routine.

There were more speeches and sore-throated cheering at the rally.

The Japanese and "Big E" bells, whose tolling signifies victory over Army, clanged again to ears that were almost numb. The "E" bell arrived only this year from the carrier Enterprise.

Congratulatory messages continued to deluge the Academy. They came from all corners of the world, even behind the Iron Curtain. One of the latest was wired from Moscow:

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Dec. 4 (AP).—Whoever has a Navy blue football jersey with gold numerals "34," please mail to Midshipman David Bannerman, Room 2215, Bancroft Hall, United States Naval Academy.

Bannerman was the Middies' bruising fullback. After the game he was jubilant host at an open house in his Philadelphia hotel room. Bannerman had kept the jersey as a lifetime souvenir of his big game. But after the party, no jersey.

"He will in turn provide a suitable souvenir for the sender," the Academy athletic office said.

Gen. Collins Lost $1 on Game

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—Among the many messages received today at the Naval Academy was one reading: "Congratulations on a wonderful victory by a great Navy team. P. S.—It cost me one buck!"

It was from Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, who sent the message from Shemya Island while en route to Tokyo for conferences on the Korean situation with General MacArthur.

SPEAKING OF FOOTBALL—Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, an old Boston College star, cuts up a few football touches with Joe Tereshenski, left, of the Redskins, and Coach Wally Butts, right, of the University of Georgia at the Touchdown Club yesterday. Butts, whose Georgians meet Texas A. & M. in the Presidential Cup game Saturday, and Tobin spoke at the TD club's weekly luncheon. Tereshenski played for Butts at Georgia before joining the Redskins

He's Happy to Be Here

Butts Finds it Pretty Hot in Georgia Now

WALLY BUTTS was 900 miles away from his native Georgia yesterday but he wasn't pining.

"I can't tell you how happy I am to be away from there this weekend," said the Georgia football coach, whose team happened to be upset by its traditional rival, Georgia Tech, last Saturday.

"As you can imagine, things are pretty rough for my family and me down home right now, and for once I'm awfully glad to be away," he told a packed audience at the Touchdown Club.

Butts, whose Bulldogs play Texas A.&M. here Saturday in the Presidential Cup game, was presented with a silver tray by the Touchdowners for his "contributions to football over the years."

"I certainly appreciate this gift," he said, "'cause I know any gifts I get from now on aren't coming from anybody in Georgia. I'm probably the only football coach in the world who got a present after losing a game he was supposed to win from a traditional rival."

Butts, who will be fielding his seventh Georgia bowl team in 11 years when the Bulldogs hook up with the Aggies Saturday, said Georgia hasn't had a good team since 1948.

"Our 1949 team tested the loyalty of our alumni and our 1950 team tested my patience," he said. "Now all of us need a rest."

"We beat Maryland with a confused offense," he pointed out. "Neither Maryland nor we knew what we were going to do with the ball. You'll get a better idea of what I mean when you see us play Saturday.

"Getting back to Maryland, they were the best team we met all year. We didn't deserve to beat them. They almost chased us off the field in the first half but after that we used our secret weapon on them—hot weather—and Jim Tatum's boys wilted."

Labor Secretary Maurice Tobin also spoke, praising the Touchdown Club for its work with youngsters. Another speaker was Col. Donald Jones of the Defense Department, who said the Army, Navy and Marine bands plus crack drill units will parade between halves of the Presidential Cup game. MORRIS SIEGEL.

Ottawa Bids For Jersey City Franchise

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 4. (AP).—Ottawa today paved the way for taking up the Jersey City franchise in the International League at today's minor league meetings.

Frank J. Shaughnessy, president of the International loop, said he had been advised by Ottawa officials they had transferred their franchise in the Border League to Cornwall, Ontario.

The New York Giants, who own the Jersey City franchise, will control the Ottawa club if it gets into the International.

The high ranking minor leagues, alert to a growing manpower problem, went on a spending spree today in the baseball draft.

The three Triple A leagues—International, Pacific Coast and American Association, set the pace by paying $126,400 for 25 men.

Another $76,500 was dished out by the two Double A leagues—Texas and Southern Association—for 22 additional men.

Even before the Class A leagues started to draft, the total bill was over $200,000.

With Classes B and C scheduled to complete their selections tomorrow, the final figure probably will be close to the $449,050 of 1949.

There were several oldsters, like Hal Gregg, the former Brooklyn and Pittsburgh pitcher, on the list. Oakland got him. But many were within the military draft range of 19 to 26.

There was very little action, outside of the draft.

Rollie Hemsley, who quit as Columbus manager, was one of those looking for a new connection. So was Kirby Higbe, the former Dodger, Pirate and Giant. Joe Medwick, out a year, was anxious to get back into the game.

Cleveland rounded out its coaching staff by hiring Jake Flowers and re-signing Al Simmons.

The Chicago White Sox got a new third base coach in Jimmy Adair, an old high school baseball playing mate of Manager Paul Richards and onetime Chicago Cub.

Hoyas Play Geneva at Arena Tonight

Georgetown University unveils its 13 highly regarded sophomores for the first time tonight at Uline Arena in its season opener against Geneva College.

The game begins at 8:45. In a preliminary game at 7:30 the Hoya Frosh will play the alumni.

As freshmen the Hoya crew compiled a record of 16 victories against only one loss last year. Most of the group are former New York City basketball stars who followed Coach Buddy O'Grady to Georgetown when he took over as Hoya coach last year.

O'Grady is enthusiastic about his team but he is keping his fingers crossed. "The boys looked fine in practice," he said. "They have the will to win and a fine record but after all, they're very green. None of them has played a minute of varsity competition. Nobody knows how they will do when the pressure is on."

All of Georgetown's starters tonight will be sophomores. The tallest man on the starting team is Hugh Beins, 6 feet 7 inches. Beins is a graduate of Manhattan Prep in New York City.

At forwards Bill Bolger, 6-5, a pivot shot expert from Xavier High in New York City will be teamed with Dennis Murphy, 6-5, of Cardinal Hayes School in the Bronx.

At guards, Bob Makatura, the smallest boy on the squad at 5-10, a former player at St. Francis Prep in Brooklyn will be paired with Barry Sullivan, 6-5, from Regis Prep in New York City.

Nick Barone Gets Shot at Ez Charles' Title Tonight

By FRITZ HOWELL

CINCINNATI, Dec. 4 (AP).—The odds fellows had Heavyweight Champion Ezzard Charles a 5-1 choice today to retain his laurels in tomorrow's 15-round title scrap with rugged Nick Barone of Syracuse.

Overlooking the fact that Barone has never been off his feet in 52 professional fights, the betting boys opine "the only thing Charles figures to lose is his mustache."

The Queen City boxing commission ordered the champ to shave the hirsute adornment from his upper lip—but it was still there today as the gladiators staged a mock weighing-in ceremony for the photographers.

His Fifth Defense

About 10,000 of Charles' hometown fans are expected to put some $50,000 on the line to watch the Cincinnati fighter's fifth defese of the title in Ohio's first heavyweight scrap in almost 20 years.

This is one championship bout in which neither principal gets a guarantee. The payoff will be on the number of dollars they draw at the gate, with Charles getting 42½ percent, and Barone 17½.

The boys offered a startling contrast at today's hand-shaking exercises. Charles, long and lithe, towered several inches over the chunky Barone who is built along the lines of a fire plug and appears as durable.

Barone's manager, Henry Andrews, told the commission that his boy is a bit of a bleeder and asked that the festivities not be stopped should the Syracuse 24-year-older spring a leak from an eye or face cut.

So Old They're Mummified

"What if Barone does bleed a little?" Andrews asked. "It's to his credit. Most fighters today are so old they can't bleed. They're mummified."

Andrews insists Barone has a good chance to walk out of the ring with the championship, especially "if Charles elects to slug it out."

Kid Gavilan Outpoints Janiro

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4 (AP).—Kid Gavilan of Cuba won a unanimous decision over Tony Janiro of Youngstown in the 10-round feature bout of the Cleveland News toyshop boxing show before 9342 fans at Cleveland Arena tonight.

Gavilan's quick left hooks and right crosses to the head won seven of the 10 rounds, and had the Ohioan close to a knockout in the eighth. Only endurance and experience enabled Janiro to weather a barrage of rights to the head and body.

At AAU Convention Here

Wilt-Gehrmann Controversy Will Be Decided Thursday

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Ten months after the race was run, the National Amateur Athletic Union will decide who won the Metropolitan A. C. mile at Madison Square last January—Fred Wilt or Don Gehrmann.

The decision will be made 250 miles away from the scene of the race when 450 A.A.U. officials begin a four-day convention at the Shoreham Hotel here Thursday.

Wilt of the Illinois A. C. and Gehrmann of the University of Wisconsin finished so close in the Metropolitan mile that the two judges were split on the winner. Asa Bushnell, secretary of the Olympic Committee, standing by, was called in to break the tie, and he decided in favor of Wilt.

Metropolitan A. C. sponsors weren't satisfied, however, and a week later, after studying pictures of the finish, declared that Gehrmann, not Wilt, was the winner.

That didn't end the controversy. It was finally decided to refer it all to the National A.A.U. body, which didn't have another meeting scheduled until this week.

Among other things on the four-day agenda are:

Recognition of 210 record claims in various sports, including the 13.6 seconds time for the 110-meter high hurdles made by Southern California's Dick Attlesey at College Park last June.

Discussion of a proposal to raise the A.A.U. sanction fee for events from $5 and $10 to $25.

Reports from all the games committees.

Laying a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier by A.A.U. President Albert F. Whetle.

Presentation of a lifetime membership to President Truman by Whetle, Dan Ferris, A.A.U. secretary, and Ed Rosenbloom, national chairman of lifetime memberships.

On Sunday, the United States Olympic Committee, headed by Avery Brundage, will complete plans for participation in the Pan American Games in February and March at Buenos Aires, and the Olympic Games at Helsinki in 1952.

At this meeting will be some of the more prominent athletic directors and college presidents of the country.

No names were mentioned, but there was speculation that First Baseman Eddie Robinson of the White Sox might be the subject of the chat.

Bladensburg's Giddens Goes to Sioux City

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 4—Pitcher Bob Giddens of Bladensburg, Md., was drafted today by Sioux City, Iowa, of the Class A Western League from Rock Hill, S. C., of the Class B Tri-State League. Sioux City has a working agreement with the New York Giants. Rock Hill was a Chicago Cubs farm.

Hoppe Wins Again

Chicago, Dec. 4 (AP).—Defending Champion Willie Hoppe of Drexel Hill, Pa., scored a 50 to 37 victory in 42 innings over Joe Chamaco of Mexico City in the ninth of their 20-block three-cushion billiards match today. Hoppe now leads 450 to 398.

Bobby Ward Receives All-America Award

Boby Ward, Maryland University guard, who today was selected on the All-America team published by Look Magazine, will be presented tonight with the gold football emblematic of that honor by Shirley Povich, Washington Post sports columnist.

Povich will make the presentation to Ward on the television program of Jim Simpson, WTOP-TV, at 6:30 p. m. At six p. m., Ward and Povich will appear on the Bob Wolff sports program on Station WWDC.

Navy Still Will Soften Football Slate

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4 (AP).—Navy accepted college football's accolades today for its stunning 14-2 conquest of mighty Army but remained firm in its determination to soften future schedules.

"This victory, pleasant as it was, will have no effect on our little deemphasis program," said Capt. Howard Caldwell, stocky beetle-browed athletic director of the Annapolis Academy.

"We simply can't go on playing such a back-breaking schedule year-in and year-out. It's suicidal."

Navy already has cancelled its 1952-53 home-and-home agreement with Ohio State. It will play Rice next year in Houston and ask the southeast school to drop the 1952 game at Baltimore please.

"This thing of playing Southern California one week, then Penn and then a team like Tulane—why, the boys never get a chance to heal their bruises between knocks.

"We would like to keep some of the tough teams—Notre Dame, certainly, and possibly Penn and Princeton. But we'd like to mix in a few softer spots here and there."

'Doc' Spears Son Honored as Best In New England

BOSTON, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Boston Gridiron Club today selected Robert S. Spears, Yale fullback, as the winner of its George Bulger Lowe Award presented annually to the youth it considers the season's outstanding college football player in New England.

Spears, whose home is in Ypsilanti, Mich., is a son of Clarence "Doc" Spears, former Maryland coach and nationally recognized player at Dartmouth College.

The selection committee, headed by Nils V. "Swede" Nelson, said the award would be presented December 6.

Nelson said only Spears' grit made him a college football player. In 1944, he recalled, Spears suffered a double fracture of one leg—above and below the knee—while playing defensive left end for McKinley Tech High School, Washington, D. C. Such an injury sometimes results in amputation, Nelson said, but Spears convinced doctors the fractures would heal.

Tommy Farr Loses On Points in Third Comeback Fight

CARMARTHEN, Wales, Dec. 4 (AP).—Tommy Farr, one-time king of British heavyweights now on the comeback trail, was outpointed by a wide margin tonight by Lloyd Marshall of Cleveland, Ohio, in a blood spattered 10-round fight.

This was Farr's third comeback fight after a layoff of 12 years. He won the other two on knockouts.

Michigan State Names 3 Terps

University of Maryland football players were honored yesterday with four places on the West Virginia All-Opponent team and three places on Michigan State's All-Opponent team.

End Elmer Wingate, Tackle Ray Krouse, Guard Bob Ward and Halfback Bob Shemonski were picked by the Mountaineers. Michigan State named Wingate, Ward and Tackle Chet Gierula. Ward received more votes on the Spartans' team than any other player.

Eleven Colleges Honored

Brad Rowland, Terrific Texan, On 'Little All-America' Again

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP).—Eleven colleges, scattered from New Hampshire to Louisiana to Washington, get their honors today with the annual appearance of the Associated Press' Little All-America fooball team.

Back on the team for a second appearance is Brad Rowland, the work-horse of the McMurry College team in Texas. Southwest conference coaches label him as one of the greatest backs ever produced in the State of Texas. Six feet tall and weighing 196 pounds, he gained 1018 yards running, 152 yards passing, scored 60 points and averaged 38.8 yards punting. A 60-minute player, he was every bit as busy on the defense.

In the backfield with the terrific Texas is Carl Taseff of John Carroll in Cleveland, the Nation's leading scorer until the final week of the campaign; Robert Miller of Emory & Henry and Richard Doyne of Lehigh.

Taseff was the Nation's leading scorer with 138 points in nine games until last week when Nebraska's Robert Reynolds embarrassed mighty Oklahoma by picking up 23 points. That gave Reynolds 157 tallies and the United States crown.

Veeck Turns Actor, Becomes 'Man Who Came To Dinner'

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Bill Veeck, former president of the Cleveland Indians, has signed to play the title role in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," it was announced today.

Monty Woolley

Bill Veeck

Veeck, noted for showmanship during his tenure with the Indians, will appear in the opening production Christmas night of a new stock company organized by Milton Krantz, manager of the Hanna Theater.

Veeck has no previous stage experience.

Veteran Actor Monty Woolley made the role famous first on Broadway and later in the film version of the hit play.

Veeck was suggested by Ray Boyle, local "ring theater" actor, director and producer. Boyle will direct the new company.

Boyle, who said he will engage New York professionals to support the uninhibited Dutchman, said Veeck would be a "natural" attraction in Cleveland.

Veeck, now living in Tucson, Ariz., wired acceptance of the part with the words "I hope you know what you're doing."

Dark Buckle Squeezes In For Second

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, Dec. 4.—A crowd of 4500 who played Hy as if Joe Culmone were riding, backed the 4-year old filly into odds-on favoritism and Apprentice Jockey Doyle Gardner didn't let the public choice players down.

In fact, he brought Hy to the wire eight lengths in front of the closest opposition in the inaugural purse.

In a tight squeeze for second money, Mrs. M. Paul's Dark Buckle was awarded the position over Clatterbuck and Covington's Weatherman. Four others, including Miss Prime, one-time minor track champion competed.

Hy carried the colors of Mrs. Helen Reightler, returned a $3.20 win mutuel and was clocked in 1:24¾ for the 6½ furlongs over a muddy track.

Now Has Nine Victories

A consistent filly, the daughter of Hyperion had placed four straight times before her trip to the winner's circle today. For the year, she now has nine victories in 25 starts and has picked up $13,100 in winnings the hard way.

Hy broke alertly but was rated by Gardner as Dark Buckle took command going into the club house turn. Weatherman then displaced the leader. Hy moved to the outside, had a slight tussle in shaking off Weatherman and finally drew out to win with speed in reserve.

$28 Daily Double

Longshot and shortshot players had their innings on the first of the 18 program meeting. The card opened mildly enough with choices winning the first and second events. C. E. George's Chaffee-Dee took the first at $6.40 and Flamingo Farm's Mr. Fixit accounted for the second, under Gardner's handling at $4.80. The two Washington-owned horses produced a $28.60 (4-9) daily double.

Among the longshots were C. E. Henry's Perhaps at $44.80 in the fourth and T. W. Smith's Simms, at $35.60 in the fifth.

Despite threatening and at times drizzling weather, betting ran ahead of the first Monday of the 1949 December meeting.

DEAR FOLKS:

AT CHARLES TOWN

A. J. Boyle, Jockey Club president, has come up with an entry gimmick that merits a hand. Horses on the also eligible list, now draw for post positions in the event they are scratched into the race. This method keeps horsemen from buying into the event. Under the old method of automatically moving in, it was possible to obtain scratches in the main body of a race and insure a place at the post for a horse on the reserve list. This has been done with regularity, particularly on the Nation's top flight tracks and, as far as I know the new method represents another "first" for Charles Town. As usual, local officials did a splendid job in having the track ready for the opening. Despite a near cloudburst Sunday night, the racing strip wasn't too bad. See you on the rail . . . BILL

Culmone Wins At Tropical Park

Jockey Joe Culmone, the national leader, switched his activities to Tropical Park in Coral Gables, Fla., yesterday and won with one of his five mounts to make his 1950 total 360.

The Sicilian lad booted Roman Miss, $9, to victory to boost his lead over Runner-up Willie Shoemaker to 15. Shoemaker had no chance to pick up ground at Hollywood Park, Calif., which had no racing today.

Court Gets Appeal of Reds

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Against a backdrop of undeclared war between communism and democracy, the Supreme Court yesterday heard the appeal in the case of America's 11 top Communists, convicted of conspiracy to advocate the violent overthrow of the Government of the United States.

The courtroom argument was calm compared to the stormy nine-month trial before Federal Judge Harold R. Medina in New York last year. Six of the 11 Communists sat quietly yesterday in the front row of the spectators' seats. A seventh, Eugene Dennis, is in jail on a contempt of Congress conviction.

On Orders from Moscow

Solicitor General Philip R. Perlman told the court that "what these people have been doing has been on orders from Moscow." He pointed out that the Court of Appeals, in upholding the convictions, had declared that it would be idle for the Government to have to wait for the eve of revolution before being able to take any action to protect itself.

Before the arguments began in the courtroom, one of the Communist leaders, Gus Hall, party secretary, issued a statement declaring that "by a peculiar coincidence of history, the issues of war and democracy are coming to a climax here today." These "issues," he said, were General Douglas MacArthur's "theory of preventive war" and the "preventive arrests" theory of the Smith Act.

The Smith Act, fathered in 1940 by Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) is the one making it a crime to conspire to "teach the duty, necessity, desirability or propriety" of overthrowing the Government by force of violence. The Government contended and the jury agreed that the Communist leaders had conspired, in setting up and running their party, to do just that.

Trial has Raucous

At the raucous trial, five attorneys were found guilty and sentenced to jail for contempt of court for their conduct. Three of them—Harry Sacher, George W. Crockett, jr., and Abraham J. Isserman—argued the case yesterday, but in restrained tones. The Supreme Court has yet to act on an appeal from their conviction, a separate case from the one heard yesterday.

Sacher said the law was "an unabashed attempt at suppression of political ideas." He talked of the ideals of the Founding Fathers in guaranteeing free speech and he declared that neither Jefferson or Lincoln would have followed such a course as the Government now has taken.

There were fewer than usual questions from the justices but at one point Justice William O. Douglas, in a comment, referred to the possibility of World War III.

Crockett said the Government's actions were "unAmerican" and "subversive of the underlying principles of democracy." Isserman conceded that the Government could act at once when there is a conspiracy to overthrow it but not when merely there is a conspiracy to teach that overthrow.

Holmes' Doctrine Cited

There was considerable discussion of the famous doctrine, enunciated by hte late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes that only when there is a "clear and present danger" may the Government put a limit on free speech. The Communist attorneys relied heavily on this doctrine but Perlman said the defendants here were "not the kind of people" Holmes and his colleague, Justice Louis Brandies, were talking about.

Perlman declared that there really was no constitutional issue because the Supreme Court, in the Gitlow case of 1925, had overruled the earlier Holmes doctrine and left Holmes and Brandies in the minority. Perlman appealed to the present Court to affirm that ruling, a case in which the Court said Gitlow, hten a Communist Party leader, had written such a violent manifesto he did endanger hte security of the state. The Smith Act was patterned on an earlier New York State law involved in the Gitlow case.

Irving S. Shapiro, who handled the case in New York, told the Court the 11 CSommunists were "professional revolutionaries" who had devoted all their adult lives to the party. He said they lead a "rigidly disciplined" group of at least 50,000 Communists ready to "move without question" once the leaders decide on revolutionary steps. He said that Communist doctrine teaches that the only way to obtain control of the Government is to seize it.

Justice Tom Clark, who was Attorney General when the case was first brought, did not sit yesterday. A decision is unlikely for several months.

Doubled Collections Of Blood Requested

The Defense Department has called on the Red Cross to double its blood collections during December to provide greatly increased quantities of plasma needed by the armed forces, it was announced yesterday.

The Red Cross, official blood procurement agency for the armed services, now is collecting blood at the rate of more than 90,000 pints a month.

3 Scientists, 2 Reds Indicted For Contempt of Congress

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Three atomic scientists and two men described by the House Un-American Activities Committee as Communist organizers were indicted yesterday on charges of contempt of Congress.

The scientists, who worked in the wartime radiation laboratory at the University of California, are David Joseph Bohm, 33; Giovanni Rossi Lomanitz, 29, Irving David Fox, 30.

The organizers are Steve Nelson, veteran Communist leader, and a key figure in the mysterious "Scientist X" case, and Marcel Scherer, 51, head of Local 4, United Electrical Workers, the union that was purged by the CIO for Communist domination.

Refused Answers

Each is charged with refusing to answer from six to 52 questions put by the committee in late 1949 and June, 1950. The maximum penalty for contempt of Congress is one year in jail and a fine of $1000 on each count.

Bohm was arrested at his Princeton home last night and arraigned in Trenton, N. J., before United States Commissioner Walter B. Petry. Bail was set at $1500 and the scientist was released. He is to appear before the Federal Court Friday in Washington.

Princeton University president Harold W. Dodd announced that Bohm has been suspended from all teaching duties. Dodd said the action was taken immediately after the announcement of the indictments in Washington.

With the five new indictments, 24 persons have now been indicted here in recent weeks for refusing to answer questions before Congressional committees. Government Prosecutor William Hitz said that no more indictments for contempt of the 81st Congress are expected.

Efforts will be made to arraign all but Scherer here Friday, Hitz said. Scherer has agreed to surrender himself December 18.

Nelson was indicted on 35 counts of contempt. He is head of District 5—Western Pennsylvania—of the Communist Party, Hizt said. Nelson was indicted in October by a Pennsylvania grand jury for sedition.

Scherer on 52 Counts

Scherer was indicted on 52 counts, for refusing to answer 52 questions. Hitz said Scherer was an organizer for the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, cited by the Un-American Activities Committee as subversive.

Lomanitz was indicted on six counts of contempt and Fox, on 16. Both were members of the FAECT, Hitz said.

Bohm, a Princeton University professor, was indicted on eight counts of contempt, by a separate grand jury.

The foreman of the grand jury that indicted the other four failed to sign the indictment papers against Bohm, and before the error was noticed that grand jury was discharged, Hitz said.

Later in the day, the case against Bohm was presented to a second grand jury, and an indictment was returned.

Dr. Conant proposes a stern program for survival—it is "must" reading for every thinking American. In the new issue of LOOK, now on sale.

How do we stack up with Russia today on the Atom bomb?

Why is it that few scientists recently have dared speak of the hydrogen bomb? How far ahead are we in the A-bomb production race with Russia? What are other nations doing with the atom? Because future uses of atomic energy for war or peace are of transcendent importance, LOOK REPORTS (a regular new feature in LOOK) is devoted entirely to a world survey of the status of atom research.

USES to Help Recruit Civil Service Workers For Huge Job Needs

Faced with recruiting tens of thousands of additional Government workers, the Civil Service Commission has taken steps to work out a cooperative agreement with the United States Employment Service.

Under it, the USES would help to recruit local people for jobs in local areas. The Civil Service Commission would then be able to spend more time to recruit employes who could be transferred from one part of the country to the other.

Along the same line, the commission foresees the time of critical manpower shortages and it is attempting to do something about it now. It has alerted its examining staff to prepare "aptitude" tests to select people who can be trained to handle defense jobs. The commission realizes it will be only a matter of time until the reserve of trained persons is exhausted.

The deepening international crisis also has inspired the commission to take another look at its hiring restrictions with a view toward knocking out any red tape and unnecessary delays.

In general, the commission is sticking to its policy that competitive tests should continue to be held for those jobs where there is a surplus of qualified people, but they realize these jobs will become fewer and fewer.

If we get into an all-out war, Civil Service will suspend all of its hiring restrictions and the agencies will be given what amounts to blanket authority to hire anyone they please, subject to job standards, etc.

Meantime, the commission is trying to decide which jobs can be filled on a permanent basis, at least for the time being. To date, it's agreed that the junior professional and scientific jobs can be filled permanently. VA, Internal Revenue, Social Security, and Agriculture are among the agencies that have asked for authority to make permanent appointments to some of their jobs on the argument that some of their activities are to be expanded permanently.

Incidentally, many permanent appointments will continue to be made after the December 1 cut-off date. The agencies will be allowed to give such appointments to persons they selected from Civil Service eligible certificates before that date. The actual appointments may be several weeks, or months, hence, but they will be made permanents just the same.

County Rule Shifts Today Amid Fight Over Surplus

Democratic Reign In Prince Georges To End; Incumbents Defend Fund Balance

The Democratic Prince Georges County Commissioners will go out of office at noon today — in the midst of a controversy over a $950,000 county surplus.

It all started when Board President Harry W. McNamee issued a statement Saturday about the "excellent condition" in which the Democrats are leaving the county government. He pointed to the surplus as evidence.

But an incoming Republican, Commissioner H. Wilson Spicknall, asked if it would not have been better to have provided money for full-time (school) classes instead of building up a surplus."

William R. Turner, board member of the Citizen's Committee for Good Government, and League of Women Voters president Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff also criticized what they called a practice of piling up a large surplus while cutting appropriations for schools and other needed projects.

Yesterday, County Treasurer James B. Bland defended the surplus, saying "maintenance of a surplus for emergencies is simply good business procedure."

County Attorney Jerrold V. Powers said the commissioners have appropriated "every construction dollar asked by the board of education."

Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart pointed to some 14 million dollars spent for new schools and additions since the war. He said an additional 15 million dollars from appropriations and operating budgets were used for postwar improvements to old buildings.

Meanwhile, speculation continued oveh appointments expected to be made by the GOP commissioners on taking office.

Adrian P. Fisher, Oxon Hill attorney, is expected to replace Powers as county attorney and a new chief of police and clerk to the commissioners are to be selected.

It is reported that no definite decision has been made on the police job and that a temporary appointment to replace Superintendent Ralph W. Brown will be made from among the four police lieutenants.

Cabbie Killed Near Memorial Bridge; Pedestrian Victim Of October Mishap

DISTRICT TRAFFIC TOLL:
1950 deaths to date.....63
1949 deaths to date.....64
Total 1949 death toll.....71

The cab driver, Kenneth W. Stillman, of 800 S. Greenbrier st., Arlington, was killed about 10:45 a. m. on Columbia Island near the Virginia end of Memorial Bridge but in the District.

Park police said he was alone in his cab, which jumped three curbs, traveled about 250 yards over a grass area and then headed down a 40-foot embankment, coming to a halt in mud.

Mr. Stillman — Mr. Cornwell

. . . Dead in traffic mishaps

Stillman was at first believed to have died of a heart attack. Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg said an autopsy disclosed, however, that death was due to a crushed chest, received when the cab stopped abruptly at the foot of the embankment.

Earlier in the day, George H. Cornwell, 79, of 1428 A st. se., died at Casualty Hospital of injuries received October 24 when he was struck by a car at East Capitol st. and Tennessee ave. se.

Death was attributed to complications resulting from a fractured right leg and head injuries. A technical charge of hold for the coroner was placed against the driver of the car, John Johnson, 43, of 437 Q st. nw. He was released in the custody of his attorney for his appearance today at 11:30 a. m., at a coroner's inquest in Cornwell's death.

Cornwell worked as a stone mason and had been a resident of Washington for about 50 years, his family said. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Wilma Gobbett, and two sons, Raymond Cornwell and George C. Cornwell, all of Washington.

Rain, Snow, Floods Hit As Thermometer Dips

RISING WATERS—Towns and cities ringed on the map indicate areas where streams were rising to danger points

Swollen Streams Blamed in Deaths Of 3 in Virginia; Wind Brings Cold

The thermometer was expected to plunge to 28 degrees in the District and 24 in the suburbs early today in the wake of a bitter storm and near-flood that swept across central Virginia to the northeast yesterday.

The Weather Bureau reported that the wind-blown cold weather last night brought snow, rain and sleet to the metropolitan area "all at the same time." Today's high temperature should be 40, followed by rain or snow Wednesday night.

The Northern Virginia area from Lynchburg to the Potomac River was hardest hit by flash floods. Several localities in the mountains and Shenandoah Valley reported rain up to 4.6 inches.

2 Men Drown in Va.

Near Stanardsville, in Greene County, Va., two men were drowned when the Middle River rose Sunday night and swept over their panel truck, which had been stalled earlier in a shallow ford.

Police said the men—James Lamb, about 21, of Lydia, and Rosser L. Madison, about 45, of Stanardsville—apparently had fallen into a deep sleep in the truck.

Lamb's body was found in bushes along the river on Route 230 at 10:30 a. m. Madison's body was found in the truck.

Forecasters, describing the freezing blast as an "intense storm" carrying temperatures as low as 20 degrees in western Maryland and Virginia, said it could bring five to 10 inches of snow in central Pennsylvania and New York.

Several farms in Loudoun were inundated by torrential rains. County school authorities closed Aldie and Douglas high schools and Middleburg and Banneker elementary schools because of flooded roads.

In the District the wind blew gusts at 40 miles per hour yesterday, but it was to continue between 15 and 25 miles per hour today. Clouds last night were to give way to sunshine — with cold weather — today.

The Peace Cross at Bladensburg rd., Baltimore ave. and Annapolis rd., according to rainy weather custom, was under water all day. Traffic was detoured.

Much of Montgomery County felt snow on top of cold rain yesterday. At 4 p. m. the Rockville weather station measured almost 2 inches of precipitation, and the thermometer said 35 degrees.

Rock Creek Over Bridge

Rock Creek was over the bridge near Cedar st. south of Kensington on Jones Mill rd. and on East-West hwy. near Forest Glen. It was at bridge level early last night on Connecticut ave. between North Chevy Chase and Kensington.

Sligo Creek was up to its banks on Sligo Creek pkwy. in Takoma Park as darkness fell.

To cope with any emergency during the night, J. O. Harvey, head of the county Division of Highway Maintenance, had 40 men standing by with six snowplows in Bethesda, seven in Silver Spring and 10 in the northern part of Montgomery.

Snow began falling in portions of Fairfax County at 2 p. m. By dark, there were two inches in the area around Fairfax Court House.

Highway Superintendent C. M. Satterthwaite said 30 trucks with snowplows, two sand spreaders and six chemical spreaders were ready to go into action.

Road Repairs Promised in Morningside

Action Pledged After Ultimatum On School Buses

Woodland dr. in Morningside will be passable by next Monday, even "if the town councilmen have to shovel gravel themselves."

This was promised yesterday by Morningside's Mayor William Spahr after an ultimatum was delivered Friday by Prince Georges County school authorities.

The town was notified then that unless holes in Woodland dr. are filled by December 11, school bus service will be discontinued.

A contract has been awarded to the Arlington Asphalt Co. to patch the street, Spahr said. Full resurfacing is planned for next spring.

Should the contractor be prevented by bad weather from completing the job by Monday's deadline, remaining holes wil be filled with bank gravel, Spahr said.

'Raising' Money

Splitting $10 Bill Charged In Indictment

Thomas P. Whalen, 27, was indicted yesterday on a charge of splitting a $10 bill and a $1 bill and trying to pass each off as a ten.

Whalen split the $10 bill so that the green and black sides were separate, according to the indictment, and did the same with a $1 bill. Then he pasted the black 10 to the green one, and gave it to a bartender as a $10 bill last month.

A little-known statute forbids just such practices, and provides a penalty of $5000 fine or 15 years in prison for passing the counterfeit, and $1000 or five years for "connecting parts of different notes."

They are Hector Beauchamp, 1446 N st. nw., and Clarence Stogner, 803 Mount Vernon pl. nw. They were charged with taking four cars from September 16 to November 11. Beauchamp was also indicted alone on a charge of stealing a car on September 17.

John Parker, jr., 39, of 1851 Kendall st. ne., was charged with murdering Eldery L. Brown, 24, of 4906 Benning rd. se., on October 28. Parker shot Brown during an argument at 1841 Kendall st. ne., police said.

Walter Jones, 22, of 1151 Eaton rd. se., and Lonnie Riley, 45, of 1521 Vermont ave. nw., were charged with murdering Albert Turner, 21, of 1214 Half st. se., during an argument at a card party in a room at 320 12th st. se., November 4. Turner was shot to death.

Two fathers were indicted under the sexual psychopath statute, charged with taking indecent liberties with their daughters. They are Robert L. Brown, 28, of 1143 10th st. nw., and Exum E. Roberts, 58, of 1439 Emerald st. ne.

Train Kills Student at Catholic U.

Edward F. Gallagher, Aspirant to Priesthood, Third Victim in 8 Days

A Catholic University divinity student was killed instantly yesterday morning when he was struck by a train in front of the university station at Michigan and Brooklyn aves. ne.

Mr. Gallagher

He was Edward F. Gallagher, 30, who resided at the Fathers of Mercy Seminary, at 1230 Quincy st. ne. He was the third person to be killed by a train within eight days in the Washington area.

Mr. Gallagher, his books and a package under his arm, was on his way to attend classes. He had almost crossed the tracks when an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio passenger train, en route from Brunswick, Md., to Union Station, struck him, witnesses said. His body was carried about 75 feet.

Engineer Unaware of Accident

The engineer, George W. Wenner, 61, of Brunswick, did not know of the accident until he was notified after pulling into Union Station, police said.

He told police he had cut the exhaust off to coast into Union Station when the train reached the Taylor st. bridge, about 500 yards from the university station. He was doing about 60 or 65 miles an hour, he said.

Two witnesses, John Whitson, 19, of 107 P st. nw., on his way to work at the Brookland Coal Co. yards, and one of Gallagher's fellow students, Robert Hearn, 907 Michigan ave. ne., said Gallagher apparently never saw the train coming.

Police said he was bare-headed and wearing glasses, which probably were clouded by the rain. The Rev. Ambrose E. Lapp, acting father superior of the Fathers of Mercy, said he was told another train had passed in the opposite direction just before the train which struck Gallagher came by.

Time Put at 758 A. M.

P. P. Baker, station master at the university station, placed the time of the accident at 7:58 a. m. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

Father Lapp said Gallagher had been a student at Catholic University for three years. He was a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and attended St. Francis School at Loretta, Pa., before coming here. His family in Brooklyn was notified by the Rev. George McGee, superior general of Brooklyn, Father Lapp said.

A seven-year-old boy, Karl Flor, 1508 Quarles st. ne., was killed Saturday when struck by a freight train on the Deane ave. trestle. The other recent victim was 12-year-old Albert Furr, Beltsville, Md., killed November 26 by a train near his home.

Pneumonia Kills Evans Triplets Here

The Edward Evans family, 4600 Blue Plains dr. sw., lost its triplets, who would have been 6 weeks old yesterday, when they died of pneumonia over the weekend.

The infants died in the order of their birth. Alfred died Saturday morning at Children's Hospital, where he had been brought after showing difficulty in breathing. Manfred died that afternoon and Wilfred late Sunday night.

Evans, a District government truck driver has three other sons, aged 3, 2 and 1. Funeral services for the triplets, born October 23, will be at the Chambers Funeral home, 517 11th st. se., Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Burial will be in Washington National Cemetery, Suitland.

Dr. William H. Spicer, who delivered the triplets, said their weight—5 pounds — made them more susceptible to infections than heavier youngsters. But until last week, the children were gaining weight satisfactorily and the pneumonia development "was not anticipated."

At first, the triplets were housed in cardboard brocery boxes, but later cribs and bassinets were secured, Dr. Spicer said.

Montgomery Police to Get 5-Day Week

Montgomery County last night was promised 30 additional policemen, with the force on a five-day week by July 1.

Delegate-elect J. Douglas Bradshaw told the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, the changes would be enacted by the county council with next year's budget.

His Montgomery associate in the House of Delegates, Anders Lofstrand, jr., said he would propose "complete revamping" of the state liquor law to return control to localities. It was "a crime" that state Liquor Control Board employes were used for election work at the polls this year, he declared.

Lofstrand promised his support of Republican platform pledges. Other legislation he will initiate or support includes repeal of the Lindsay Law for non-partisan elections to the county council, a State constitutional convention, State legislation for civil defense, deduction of Federal income taxes on State income tax returns and State motor vehicle inspection law.

County Councilman Harold Hammond, the only holdover from the pre-election membership, said the county should be ready by January of 1952 to administer each of the four State agencies mentioned by Lofstrand.

Area Counties Pay $2,517,905 Sales Tax

Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties contributed $1,477,465 and $1,040,440, respectively, to Maryland in retail sales taxes during the last fiscal year, the State comptroller's office reported yesterday.

Baltimore County was the only other county to top the million-dollar mark. The tax brought the State a total revenue of more than 28 million dollars.

Gunwoman Gets $50 in Store Holdup

Mrs. Pauline J. Rogers, owner of the Rogers Book and Gift Shop, 102 S. St. Asaph st., said the woman came in shortly after 4:30 p. m., waited until other customers left, then asked for 60 cents worth of Christmas cards.

When Mrs. Rogers started to change a $5 bill tthe woman had given her, she was informed it was a hold-up, she said. The woman pulled a small revolver from a green scarf to emphasize the point.

When Mrs. Rogers asked her why she was picking on such a small place, the woman bandit told her a man was waiting outside for her to bring him some money, Mrs. Rogers said.

She described the woman as a blue-eyed brunette, about 35 years old, five feet five inches tall and weighing 140 pounds. She wore a light grey raincoat, Mrs. Rogers said.

USCS Approves Pay Increases For D. C. Officials

The United States Civil Service Commission informed the District Commissioners yesterday that it would approve increases for five top District officials, but not to the extent recommended.

Lyle was charged in Municipal Court yesterday with destroying movable property and discharging firearms without a permit. He was held under $800 bond and the case was continued to December 19.

Burke Urged As Air Warden

Daniel J. Burke, president of the Hyattsville (Md.) Professional and Businessmen's Association, last night was recommended by the Hyattsville City Council for appointment as chief of the air warden service in Hyattsville.

The recommendation was made in response to a request from E. F. Zalesak, of College Park, who is chief of the Prince Georges County air warden service. Hugh T. McClay, of Hyattsville, was recommended as an alternate.

It was announced that the City Council will hold a special meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building to discuss annexation with residents of the area bounded by 37th pl., Hamilton st., Queens Chapel rd. and the Northwest Branch.

Crime Probe Group Meets With Judges

Seven Washngton jurists last night held a two-hour conference with members of the House District Crime Investigating Committee on the proposed bill to stiffen District law enforcement.

Committee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said the meeting in the House Office Building "brought out a helpful discussion on the entire bill and placed us a good distance toward the final perfection of the bill."

He said the judges were in "enthusiastic agreement" with a provision establishing a council on law enforcement in the District.

Representing the judiciary were Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws, Judge Alexander Holtzoff, and Judge James R. Kirkland, of District Court; and Chief Judge George P. Barse, Judge Thomas D. Quinn, Judge Frank H. Myers and Judge Walter J. Casey of Municipal Court.

Police Search N.W. After Sex Assault Attempt

Working under Inspectors Robert V. Murray and Robert C. Pearce and Capt. Edgar Scott, police rounded up 12 suspects, all of whom were released after being quizzed.

The assault took place within three blocks of the spot where a 17-year-old girl was raped on November 20.

Inquest Holds Pool Room Murder Suspect for Jury

A coroner's jury yesterday held Arthur S. Barnett, 33, of 1721 Corcoran st. nw., for grand jury action after an inquest into the death of Algie Wilkerson, 38, of 1611 O st. nw.

Wilkerson was killed Saturday night, during a fight in a pool room at 1511 7th st. nw., when he was struck by Barnett with a cue, police said. An autopsy disclosed he died of a crushed Adam's apple. Barnett was arrested by police on a murder charge.

Nelson died Sunday at Emergency Hospital where he had been admitted last Tuesday after falling and striking his head while visiting at 419 K st. nw., police said. Death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Situation in Korea 'Freezes' Hains Point Anti-Flood Job

The tense Korean situation reached all the way to the District's Hains Point yesterday, putting a "freeze" order on funds which would have bulwarked the recreation area against floods.

National Capital Parks officials had been expecting to use 40,000 cubic yards of soil pumped up in the dredging of Washington Channel to raise the level of the frequently flooded roadways and public golf course on the point.

Yesterday, it was learned, however, that the Budget Bureau had ordered the channel project shelved in the interest of more vital defense expenditures.

Unless this "freeze" is removed, Edward J. Kelly, NCP superintendent, said, the Hains Point project will have to be put aside, too, since there are no NCP funds available for this.

Falls Church Studies Possible Auto Tax

An automobile license tax may have to be imposed on Falls Church residents to make up for the money the city will lose when it cuts the $4.55 property tax rate, the City Council indicated last night.

Because of the rise in real estate values the present tax rate in 1951 would double taxes in many cases. The council said it would lower the tax rate but will have to make up the deficit somewhere else.

City Manager W. R. Woodbury proposed the auto tax to meet the deficit and to pay for road repairs. Many council members opposed the plan in a long discussion and the council finally decided not to act until further discussion at subsequent meetings.

Revisions in the business license tax, recommended by the finance committtee and the commissioner of revenue, were worked over point by point by the council. A public hearing on the revised ordinance will be held sometime this month before it is put into effect for 1951.

The council passed a resolution asking its Congressional representatives to fight for financial aid and representation for Falls Church on the proposed National Capital Planning Commission.

Another resolution passed by the council will create a Business Development Committee. The new committee will work with business groups in emphasizing to outside business interests the city's commercial advantages.

Takoma Park Cops Get $100-a-Month Raise

Takoma Park City Council last night voted to grant $100-per-month salary increases to its 13 policeman through the rank of sergeant.

Raises will become effective January 1. They will continue through June, under last night's action, after which they will be extended under the 1951-52 budget. The council also authorized employment of three police clerks at $2000 to $2400 a year.

Miss Batigne Sings Old French Songs

By Paul Hume

Few concerts today present music written entirely before 1784.

In that year Mozart still had his greatest operas before him. Beethoven was only 14, and had just been appointed second court organist at Bonn. Haydn was writing his Parisian symphonies, and the dead Bach was midway in the long years during which his music was neglected.

Yet these names are usually the oldest on our recital programs. Not so last night, when Charlotte Batigne sang early French songs at the Phillips Gallery.

From Ambrosian chant of the fourth century to the charm and rich invention of Gretry, there was music of fresh melody, daring harmony, and sprightly rhythms.

Anthony Chanaka played accompaniments of unusual delicacy and good balance. Miss Batigne is so thoroughly at home in the complications of her chosen field of music that she can bring it to life for long stretches at a time.

In the lusty song of the laborer, her mood changes with each verse; in the fascination of The Seasons, a brief ballet by Pascal Colasse, she wreaths a magic spell of words, sound, and imagined scenes.

Rameau and Couperin — giant names in seventeenth and eighteenth century France were there. The religious solos of Couperin are restrained in their appeal. But from the daring of Rameau, the tragic lines of the High Priest, in Castor and Pollux, were moving in the extreme.

In all her singing, Miss Batigne conveys any mood she chooses. Her words, so vital in such music, are nearly always clear, though occasionally strangely muffled. If her method of singing could be freed from a constant constraint, she would have rare evenings to give her friends and admirers.

Gaming Raids Result in 2 New Arrests

Two additional arrests were made yesterday as a result of the series of raids Saturday on fraternal and veterans clubs in Montgomery County, Md.

Those arrested were the stewards of the Bethesda and Silver Spring lodges of the Moose. They were:

Edwin Pipelow, 31, 8708 Barron st., Silver Spring, a decorator, steward of the Silver Spring lodge, where a console slot machine was confiscated, police said. Pipelow was charged with possession of gambling paraphernalia and released on bond of $500 for a hearing December 19 in Silver Spring Police Court.

Lester L. Miller, 42, 444 Grosevenor la., Bethesda, steward of the Bethesda lodge, had the same charge lodged against him at Bethesda, police substation, where he posted $500 for a hearing December 11 in Bethesda Police Court. Miller is a restaurant operator in Bethesda. Four punchboards were seized at the lodge, police said.

Chief of Police Charles M. Orme said that action against the American Legion home in Silver Spring might be dropped since the machines found there were stored in an attic and covered with dust and at least two were not in operating condition. None of the machines confiscated was in operation, he said.

Deferment For Animal Shelter Asked

The West Kensington (Md.) Civic Association last night voted to ask the Montgomery County Council to defer plans for its proposed animal shelter in West Kensington.

Another public hearing in the matter was also requested.

In a resolution passed at a meeting at the Kensington Elementary School, the group stated that the shelter would be in a residential area and would constitute a public nuisance as well as depreciate property values.

The groups said other sites should be available in sections of the county where there would be no resulting property loss.

Charles Jones, attorney representing 51 petitioners who have protested the location, said they were mostly concerned about the value of their property and the noise and odors from the shelter.

New Suit Filed Against Bonds In Fairfax

The off-again, on-again fight of a Fairfax man against $11,480,000 worth of county and school bonds was on again yesterday when Paul E. Rhinehart, jr., landowner, filed his second suit to block the issue.

In his motion for a declaratory judgment filed in Fairfax Circuit Court, Rhinehart asked Judge Paul Brown to void the $1,500,000 bond issue for "critical" school construction and $980,000 for a new courthouse addition.

Fairfax Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh said bids by New York bond companies to purchase the two issues will be received in Fairfax today.

He said he did not yet know what effect the new Rhinehart suit will have on future sale of the bonds.

Rhinehart's first suit, which he filed July 7 jointly with Charles Gardner, also of Fairfax, also attacked the May 30 bond referendum as invalid. The suit was withdrawn October 26 "in the best interests of the children and residents of Fairfax County."

County School Superintendent W. T. Woodson said yesterday Rhinehart's first suit delayed the sale of school bonds almost four months.

When Fairfax County voters approved the bonds in a referendum last May 30, the suit said, Alexandria's annexation suit against the county was pending.

Since then, the city won a 7.5 square mile chunk of Fairfax County. The decision freed residents of the disputed land of any obligation to pay a share of the bond issue.

Such a decision "subjects the remaining taxpayers of the county to a greater debt . . . than they agreed to assume in the referendum," Rhinehart said.

In a statement, he declared that such an increase "cannot be arbitrarily saddled upon these taxpayers without their consent." He called the bond issues "a flagrant attempt" to force county taxpayers into "a spending splurge."

Named defendant were the Fairfax Board of Supervisors, the School Board, County Treasurer Lewis Coyner, and Commissioner of Revenue John W. Ferguson.

Robinson was accused of rifling about 300 envelopes and taking $500 between last May and August while working in the airport post-office. Postal officials said he is a college graduate and a former teacher.

Among 13 others indicted by the jury yesterday was Edward P. Flynn, 32, of Peninsula, Ohio, accused of embezzling $120 from the Fort Belvoir, Va. post exchange where he worked. Flynn did not appear in court. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest.

Two escapees from Occoquan Reformatory, Joseph M. Ramsey, jr., 25, of 227 3d st. nw. and Clifton A. Rice, 19, of South Boston, Va., got three-year suspended sentences and were placed on probation.

Man on Trial Gets Call to Jury Service

Luther R. Weakley, 49, first-degree murder defendant, on trial in the fatal shooting of Thomas G. Carnes, 43, was excused yesterday from jury duty in District Court.

Weakley took the stand in his own defense shortly after his lawyer, James J. Laughlin, handed Judge Edward M. Curran a jury summons, inviting Weakley to appear at the courthouse today for possible jury duty. Judge Curran wrote "excused" on the summons.

On the witness stand, Weakley said that Carnes, his former employer at Blue Plate Foods, Inc., 316 F st. ne., had been worried by shortages in company accounts, reported to total several thousand dollars.

He said Carnes tried to borrow money from him and then wanted him to falsify his reports to show that "considerable merchandise" had been given away as samples.

Laughlin laid the groundwork for Weakley's testimony by telling the jury his actions at the time of the killing were in self-defense.

The Government has produced evidence that Weakley was discharged as a salesman the day before the killing at the Blue Plate Foods office on May 20. Witnesses said that after three shots were fired in Carnes' office Weakley rushed out, and Carnes lay dying on the floor.

Laughlin, in the opening defense statement, said that shortly before the fatal episode Carnes telephoned Weakley, talked "belligerently," and ordered Weakley to a conference. Fearing harm, Weakley carried a gun with him, said Laughlin.

When Weakley appeared, Carnes threatened to "cut his tongue out," the lawyer said, and Carnes' knife fell to the floor in a scuffle.

"Weakley then reached for his gun and in the struggle two or three shots were fired," Laughlin said.

Called as a character witness was Salvation Army Capt. Carl Hansen, who said that for a long time Weakley was a regular attendant at Bible services and had a good reputation.

British, French Visitors Speak

League Hears Plea for Peace

By Flora Gill

"THE UNITED Nations exists for peace," one French and one British member of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom told guests of the D. C. Branch at a tea yesterday afternoon at the International Student House.

Mme. Andree Jouve of Paris and Mrs. G. R. McGregor Wood of London were invited by the American Section of the group to come to the United States on a speaking tour as part of the league's thirty-fifth anniversary celebration.

Mrs. Wood expressed her deep concern at the outcome of the Truman-Atlee conference now taking place in the White House.

BOTH MME. JOUVE and Mrs. Wood stressed the intense desire felt in both France and Great Britain that present international difficulties be solved by peaceful means. "This indeed is the very object for which the league was founded," Mrs. Wood asserted.

"We do venture to appeal to all the American people, who fortunately on their own soil have known so little of the hardships of war, to understand what the peoples in Europe are feeling," Mrs. Wood said.

Asked what ideas the league has for a peaceful solution of world problems, Mrs. Wood suggested "the mediating abilities of the Eastern countries themselves" and named India's Prime Minister Nehru as a possible mediator.

Mrs. Wood, who has been a candidate for Parliament as a Liberal, offered further specifications for peace: "Eastern people themselves to act as interpreters. We believe it would be excellent if a truce could be called during the negotiations. We would like to suggest a neutral strip of territory and, of course, for the United States to reiterate that it has no territorial ambitions whatever in Asia. And, of course, use to the full of all powers of mediation."

MME. JOUVE, who is consultant for the league to UNESCO, has been in Washington once before, 26 years ago, at the 1924 congress when Jane Addams, one of the founders of the league, was present. This was the first visit for Mrs. Wood who is chairman of the British Section of the league.

Matthews' Aide Reports on Trip To Combat Zone

"The loss rate of wounded men has been lower in the Korean War than any time in history," Col. R. W. Hayward, USMC, Special Aide to the Secretary of the Navy, told the Woman's National Democratic Club at their luncheon yesterday.

Pinch-hitting for Secretary of the Navy Matthews, who was called to a Capitol Hill conference, Col. Hayward cited Maj. Gen. Edgar Erskine Hume, Chief Surgeon of the United Nations, as authority for his statement.

Col. Hayward, with Secretary Matthews, returned Thursday from an 18-day tour of naval operating forces in the combat zone.

Mrs. Fred Morrison, president of the club, presided at the meeting, and Mrs. Frank Pace, wife of the Secretary of the Army, who is chairman of the Program Committee, introduced the speaker.

Others at the Speakers' Table included Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, wife of the Postmaster General; Mrs. James L. Houghteling and Mrs. Dan A. Kimball.

Woman Asks How to Help Her Charming Sister, 35, Overcome Frustrated Attachment to Bachelor Who Seems Inextricably Involved With Aging Divorcee

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A problem in my sister's life has been a constant worry to me this past year, but she confides in me so little that I am afraid to broach the subject to her. As our parents are dead I feel a special responsibility to help her if I can and I am hoping you can guide me. I married early and never had such a problem myself.

My sister, now 35, is a lovely person—attractive, chic, cultured, a college graduate with an excellent teaching job. She was always popular and seemingly well adjusted, in the sense that she had many beaus without being aggressive for dates. She seems to fit in anywhere and can draw away from vulgarity without being a prude. She wants marriage and I think has tried to acquire the assets a man expects in a wife. She has passed up many men in the big money, Ivy League class, and for some reason I can't fathom has got dependent on Tom, a bachefor 35, who has been calling her off and on for six years.

Tom seems a nice chap, with the same qualifications, except for less money, that her other admirers have had; but there is another woman in his life, a divorcee 10 or more years his senior. I am told he had an affair with this Mrs. X in another town before he knew my sister Eve. Mrs. X followed him to this locality, makes it her business to be near him, even to the extent of getting a job in his club, and calls him several times daily. She seems very predatory in a Gay Nineties sort of way; and is probably 50, trying to look 35. As Tom looks younger than his years, they are a queer looking pair.

Eve's friends tell her that Tom, though fond of her, isn't treating her well, as all his big evenings are spent with Mrs. X. Tom's friends claim he is trying to get rid of Mrs. X, but is too gentlemanly to tell her to go to Hades. But Mrs. X has friends who say Tom is her constant boy friend and they expect him to marry her. Tom's answer to this is a blank look. Eve had an amused attitude toward Mrs. X at first, never thinking the situation would go on for years. Now Eve's personality is so changed that it grieves us to see her—nervous, uncertain and floundering. I really believe she is having an affair with Tom, which strikes terror to my heart.

Eve still dates other men, but is losing ground with them as the years pile up, though she doesn't see that. She and Tom seem so "right" together, and he is so attentive, almost grateful, in her company, that friends can't understand why he would even be seen with the hardboiled Mrs. X. Can a man be so entoiled, against his will, that he can't break away? What chance has a normally reared girl in this set-up? I feel I must get Eve out of it; but how? Tom is an orphan, by the way, reared by a wealthy domineering aunt; and could this explain Mrs. X's hold on him? Please advise.

Z. S.

DEAR Z. S.: As I see the overall picture, Tom is the ace manipulator of female frustration here; not that he is wilfully intent on thwarting the ladies, but because his overweening unconscious dynamic is "save me first!" He has a chronic problem of excessive emotional dependency; or call it psychological infantilism; and he is trying to assuage the almost intolerable anxieties that issue therefrom.

Tom has hit on a neurotic "security system" for himself that consists in dividing his emotional dependency between Mrs. X and Eve, for two reasons: 1. To defend himself against the possibility of becoming too vulnerably attached to either devotee—in the sense of vesting himself in an exclusively interdependent intimacy with either one. 2. So that if either love fails him—by rejecting, disappointing or deserting him—he has the other to fall back on.

Your references to Tom's background, to his being an orphan reared by a wealthy domineering aunt, suggest the "conditioning" factors that probably instigate his ambivalent neurotic romancing. From the hour of birth he instinctively developed total dependency upon his mother's person and interest for succor. But she disappeared from his life very early—inexplicable Shock No. 1 to his emotional constitution. This was followed by the uneasy experience of long-term dependency upon a tyrant aunt who doubtless played upon his "insecurity" bias to compel obedience to her self-aggrandizing rule,—if we may judge by the damage done his character.

In brief, Tom's emotional buffeting, both literal and subjective, has blocked his growth. He is inordinately afraid of the normal risks of hurt that are implicit in an adult monogamous love relationship. And it appears that Eve and Mrs. X are neurotically conditioned to feel an affinity for his infantilism. Perhaps each woman feels, unconsciously, that she couldn't live up to a real man's expectations of a mate; or perhaps, each is afraid of "sex" as such, and seeks to get around the inhibition by having a mother-son type of "love" with a magnetic clinging-vine male.

Eve's being a teacher may reflect anxious orientation to an ingrained sense of inadequacy, as compared to and in relation to her compeers—especially males. She may feel more secure in the oracular role than in testing her "living" competence in a world of competitive action. Perhaps her character was shaped to a mold of "mothering" you during her formative years, so that she missed out on play-companionship with boys, that might have given her confidence in her capacity to please them, as co-equal collaborator.

In any case, Eve's problem is herself, not Tom. Her ignominious attachment to him is simply an evasion of better men. If and when she glimpses that truth, she may, with psychiatric help, begin to outgrow him.

Experiment Ruth

For Youth, Avoid a Mental Rut

By Ann Lawrence

(Twelfth Day of Ruth's Beauty Program)

PERHAPS YOU REMEMBER Ruth's major concern—looking older than her husband.

Think of the couples you know. How many wives do look older than their husbands, even though they may be younger in years?

Such wives seem to have acquired a "settled," matronly look far beyond their actual years. Some look tired, others bored, some seem to have that "I-couldn't-care-less-about-appearance" attitude.

Listen to these wives talk. The butcher, the baker, the baby—that's about as far as their conversation goes. No wonder they seem old. For, mentally, they are settled—right down into a comfortable rut! But just how secure is that rut?

Ruth, anxious to keep mentally and physically young and attractive, has made the first step towards her goal. And that is recognizing the problem and wanting to do something about it.

TRUE, she does not have much time to devote to away-from-home activities. But there are things to do at home that can keep her from mental stagnation, accompanied almost invaribly by physical-apearance deteriation.

The radio, for example. There's more on the air waves than the standard soap operas. Current event discussions, good music, book reviews, informative lectures—all are hers with the twist of a dial. Why not, we asked her, set aside at least half an hour each day for listening to some worthwhile radio program? She can go right on with her sewing or mending or ironing while she's at it.

Reading—really reading—at least one newspaper daily (and no fair skipping the editorials and news background articles, either)—should be a "must" on every housewife's list of things to do.

Ruth's husband loves bridge, a game she has never learned. Now she has bought a beginner's book on the subject and in her own neighborhood, has found three other young wives who are anxious to learn the game. Two afternoons a week, the children are brought together in the hostess' backyard, while the mothers settle down for two hours of study and play.

Bowling is another favorite pastime of the Harveys. Since her husband has two free mornings each week, Ruth takes this time to bowl with him. The older boy is in school and the younger she deposits with a neighbor, whose child she keeps one afternon a week in return.

Examining her daily schedule she found it possible to fit these pursuits of happiness in, with a minimum of disconvenience. Ruth is taking out insurance—against pre-mental old age.

Romance Rumors Play Havoc With Her Other Dates, Says Margaret

MARGARET TRUMAN
. . . definitely not engaged

By Elizabeth Maguire

"DEFINITELY NOT ENGAGED" was Margaret Truman's emphatic denial yesterday of recent rumors that she plans to marry Marvin Braverman, D. C. attorney and her frequent escort at Capital parties. What's more, she complained that these rumors were "playing havoc" with her other dates.

The President's daughter made the statement at a press conference in connection with her concert appearance tonight in Constitution Hall.

"I never have been, I am not now, nor do I ever intend to be engaged to Mr. Braverman," said Margaret. Feminine reporters had asked her first thing, "Are you going to marry Marvin?"

Miss Truman added that she thought Marvin Braverman was "a very charming and intelligent man," but that there were many others she went out with more often.

THE CONFERENCE was held at 3 p. m. in the East Wing of the White House, and although Charles Ross, secretary to the President, was present, the conference was conducted by Margaret alone. Men reporters who attended had been persuaded ahead of time to let the women do the questioning.

"What are you giving your father for Christmas?" "What do you do with all the money you are making?" and "How much do you weigh now?" were a few of the eager queries.

A less seasoned subject might well have blanched, but the President's daughter didn't blink. She did admit toward the end of the session, however, that questions asked her in Washington were different from questions in other cities. "You all know me too well," she surmised.

"TELL US HOW the engagement rumor played havoc with your other dates," she was asked.

"When I returned to New York, my telephone rang and rang," said Miss Truman. 'Do we still have a date Tuesday,' asked one friend. 'What's going on' asked another."

"Who were these swains?"

"Please," laughed Miss Truman, "don't get them into it. I want to have a few beaux left."

"Is there anyone you go out with more than with Mr. Braverman?" the press persisted. "There are many I go out with many more times than with Mr. Braverman," answered Margaret, who also stated she had no marital plans whatever.

THE MATTER cleared, attention was shifted to Margaret's career.

Questions and answers brought to light that Margaret hasn't the faintest idea how much she weighs at present, that she sets aside an hour and a half a day for vocalizing, and that she studies German and French. Ballet and gymnastics, which she took in grade school and high school, she no longer pursues.

And she has a new piano. When her father visited her new apartment in October, his only comment was "Your piano is out of tune." World leaked out, and the next day the piano company sent up a new one.

Asked if she planned to go overseas to sing for the troops, Margaret said, "You will have to ask my manager about that. I would like very much to sing for the troops in Korea, but I have to fulfill my present schedule, which will be completed next April."

WHEN MARGARET was asked what she did with her earnings, she seemed to think the answer was self-evident. "Have you tried traveling these days?" she laughed.

"Do you pay an excess profit tax?" ventured a gentleman of the press. Margaret laughed again "Now how in the world could I do that?"

About her father's Christmas present, Miss Truman said: "I don't know, and I wouldn't tell you if I did know. You'd put it in the paper and then it would be no surprise to my father."

Margaret's new singing teacher, Sidney Dietch, was introduced to Miss Truman by Leonard Warren, leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera. Asked who had instigated the severing of relations with her former teacher, Miss Helen Traubel, Miss Truman said, "No one. It was simply a matter of time. Miss Traubel had to travel as much as I did, and it left us very little time in which we could work. I thought I needed intensive study. And so did the critics."

FOR HER CONCERT this evening at Constitution Hall, Margaret plans to wear a pink satin dress, made on old-fashioned lines by Mme. Pola. Her program will include a group of early American folk songs by Francis Hopkinson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Mrs. Collins Holds Down the Fort

By Marie McNair

WHEN THE CHIEF OF STAFF, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, and Mrs. Collins, sent out their invitations for a dinner last night, they had little idea that the turn of events in Korea would take the General to Tokyo.

So—it was left to Mrs. Collins to carry on without her husband at the Officers Club at Fort McNair. The party was planned in honor of Army commanders here for their semiannual conference, many from Army bases throughout the country.

Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace were included in the group and also the Army Undersecretary, Archibald Alexander, and Mrs. Alexander; and the Army Assistant Secretaries, Karl Bendetson and Earl D. Johnson, with Mrs. Bendetson and Mrs. Johnson.

VICE CHIEF OF STAFF Gen. Wade Haislip and Mrs. Haislip were also guests and the company included Deputy Chief of Staff Lieut. Gen. Matthew Ridgway and Mrs. Ridgway; Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans and Mrs. Alfred Gruenther; Gen. Mark Clark from Fort Monroe, Va.; Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer from the Presidio in California; Gen. James A. Van Fleet and Mrs. Van Fleet from Fort Meade, Md.; Gen. and Mrs. Willis D. Grittenberger from Governors Island, N. Y.; Gen. John Hodge from Atlanta; Gen. Joseph Swing from Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; Gen. Stephen Chamberlain from Chicago; Gen. and Mrs. John Leonard from Fort Bragg, N. C.; Gen. Horace L. McBride from Fort Leavenworth; Gen. L. C. Aurand from Hawaii.

PRIME MINISTER CLEMENT ATLEE, who arrived yesterday for consultations at the White House, dined at the British Embassy last night with the Ambassador and Lady Franks as hosts and the Prime Minister's senior staff officers also included in the company.

Today there will be a White House luncheon for Prime Minister Atlee and on Wednesday evening Secretary of State Dean Acheson will be host at dinner in his honor. Secretary of Defense George Marshall will entertain at luncheon for the visitor on Thursday. The Prime Minister is expected to leave for England later that day.

Miss Libbey To Be Bride

Mrs. Winslow F. Sampson announces the engagement of her foster daughter, Miss Ethel Mary Libbey, to Gardner Hastings Page of Boston, son of Mrs. Wallace Page of Great Barrington, Mass. Miss Libbey is the daughter of the late Comdr. Miles A. Libbey and the late Mrs. Ethel Gaudelet Libbey. She is a sister of Comdr. Miles A. Libbey, jr., and of Theodore W. Libbey of Washington. Mr. Page attended Belmont Hill School and was a captain in the Army with the Tenth Armored Division under the late General Patton.

Next time let's try— The CALIFORNIA WAY!

WHY BE SO FANCY AND FUSSY? It's lots more fun—and easier—to entertain the California Way. Be informal—but put warmth into your hospitality. Add gay, bright color . . . and give your party a sparkle . . . by serving wine. Rich-red, velvety Port wine of California, for example. It costs so little. And it's so easy for you. For with wine, you just cool and serve.

Tobé Says

Violets in the Snow Are Lucky

There's an old wives' tale that "violets in the snow bring you luck, you know," and if this is so, all of us should be lucky this winter—if we follow fashion closely enough to buy something in violet.

For violets are having an early blooming in all fashion fields—the clear bluish wood violets, the light Parma violets, the deep-tone big single violets.

There are violet fleece coats; violet dresses—in thin wools and silks and prints; violet evening gowns in handsome violet silk taffetas and satins; violet hats, in velvet or felt or made of thin violet flowers; and, later on, violet leather bags and shoes.

And to top it all off, real "violets in the snow"—bouquets of artificial violets . . . sprinkled with snow dust.

Ask Anne

Prospect of Painting Gets Window All Steamed Up, But Anne Finds an Answer

DEAR ANNE:

I have a picture window on which I would like to do a nice scene for the Christmas holidays. My problem is this: The window steams up terribly and I had planned to use a scratchless scouring preparation for my decoration on the inside. To this, I want to add color. Will the steam ruin this, or will condensation not form so long as there is a foreign body on the window? N. C. R., Falls Church, Va.

You're likely to have trouble with the condensation and the water-soluble preparation. Evidently there's quite a bit of moisture in the atmosphere at your house. The thin wall of glass gets cold quickly and the warm moist air condenses on it. Here's a way to get around the problem: Use glass frosting paint, available in a number of paint stores. You can add tint to this with a tube of oil coloring. Later the frosting can be removed with paint and varnish remover. Only thing you'll have to watch is getting the remover on your window frame. For this reason, it would be a good idea not to decorate right up to the frame. Mask off woodwork with paper tape, too, before you use the remover on the glass.

DEAR ANNE:

We are planning to be in another city at Christmas time. Can you tell me if either of the following ways are correct for forwarding Christmas cards (second class mail)?

1. Addition of 1c stamp with change of address.

2. Several cards tied in one bundle with full second or (?) first class postage paid on the bundle by weight.

Is there any other convenient regulation method? I would like to see our cards before the holiday season is over, as it will be when we return! M. R., Washington, D. C.

An additional 2c is required for forwarding the second-class, unsealed cards. (First class letters or cards require no extra postage for forwarding.)

However, if cards are put in a bundle, it can be mailed fourth class if it is 8 ounces or over in weight. If it is under 8 ounces, third class postage is required.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you have a recipe for pecan pie? E. E. S., Vienna, Va.

PECAN PIE

1 9-inch, unbaked pie crust
1-cup unbroken pecan meats
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt

Arrange pecan meats over pastry lining in pie pan. Cream butter and sugar together thoroughly, then add remaining ingredients, beating well. Pour into unbaked pastry shell over the pecans and bake in very hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool.

Used Car

We all would like an auto new . . . To take us here and there . . . And one that would not cost so much . . . To drive or to repair . . . But when we do not have the cash . . . To buy the latest fad . . . There always is the motor car . . . That someone else has had . . . The car that has been traded in . . . And now is advertised . . . As being quite a bargain and . . . An asset to be prized . . . It may not be as fancy or . . . As elegant to see . . . As one assembled lately and . . . Delivered F.O.B. . . . But if we choose it carefully . . . It may be good as new . . . And when we pay the purchase price . . . We save some money too.

8 Banks Pay $2,123,474 in Yule Savings

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Christmas savings plan is making a strong comeback among Washington banks, a survey showed yesterday.

With the exception of the Industrial Bank, all local institutions discontinued the Yule deposit system during World War II because of a manpower shortage. Since the war ended, however, the systematic deposit plan has gradually been reinstated.

For 1950, eight Washington banks had $2,123,474 in Christmas savings which have been or are being paid out to more than 32,000 depositors. At least two more local banks have announced they are launching similar Santa savings plans for 1951.

Leader for 1950 was the Bank of Commerce & Savings, which paid $525,000 to 7800 accounts. Second was the Industrial Bank with $390,000 for 6000 depositors. Others were: City Bank, $227,785, Hamilton National Bank (two branches), $100,321; National Bank of Washington, $132,936; National Savings & Trust Co., $253,560; Union Trust, $305,631; and Washington Loan & Trust, $188,241.

Liberty National Bank and Munsey Trust Co. have launched Yule savings plans for 1951.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 4 (AP)—The dead weight of a crucial international impasse dragged the grain market down today.

While the war news shoved everything else into the background of traders' minds, cereals slipped fractionally to a couple of cents in a market which dragged along uncertainly most of the day. It showed flashes of life only at the start and the close.

Wheat closed ¼-½ lower, corn ¾-1⅛ lower, oats ¾-1½ lower, rye 1¾ to 2 cents lower, soybeans ¾-1¼ lower and lard 18 to 30 cents a hundred pounds lower.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP)—The cotton market suffered a sharp price reversal today, with final prices down 40 cents to $8.20 a bale. Heaviest losses were recorded for old crop months-December through July 1951 delivery. Traders said that the market's action could be attributed to nervousness over the Korean war situation and to uncertainties over price controls. They said if price controls were imposed they would affect the nearby, or old crop months.

PERSONAL L

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Portrait in Red

Josef Stalin, renowned the world over as The Worker's Friend, has never been known to have done a day's work even as a white-collar worker . . . There is more blood than callous on his hands . . . He is 5 ft. 4, browneyes, pocked complexion . . . When he was 17 he enlisted with professional revolutionaries. Instigating trouble was his forte and still is . . . Ironically, this chief of history's most powerful atheistic force received the major part of his formal education in a theological seminary . . . His mother hoped he'd become a priest.

His three-room suite in the Kremlin is not lavish. He loathes public pomp . . . He derives his greatest satisfaction from acquisition and extension of power . . . Over life and death . . . While Stalin's alleged accomplishments are the main themes of all Russian periodicals, his private life is iron-curtained . . . This is part of the mystery-man propaganda and the spurious diefication process . . . His propaganda men believe human interest trivia might distort Russia's popular image of Stalin as a superman . . . When Pravda reported the sudden death of his second wife (in 1932), it was the first time the Russian people knew he had married again . . . His third marriage was soon after the last war . . . His current wife has never appeared publicly with him. She resides at their country estate.

No member of his immediate family has lived at the Kremlin for many years . . . Psychiatrists probably can explain this: He has calmly sentenced millions to slavery and death—yet Stalin will weep while witnessing a corny tear-jerking movie . . . The punishment for despots, whose power stems from fear, is that they are condemned to live in it . . . Stalin doesn't trust anybody . . . He has a personal secret police, who keep an eye on Stalin's official bodyguard.

One freak factor in his complex personality: Despite numerous acts of barbarism (carried out with primitive savagery), Mr. Communist has his prudish whims . . . He deplores the mildest off-color risqayites in books and is appalled by shady quips . . . Stalin served considerable time behind bars (during the Czarist era) for crimes ranging from blackmail to highway robbery . . . He once hi-jacked 500,000 rubles . . . During the early days of the revolution he served as Lenin's strong-arm aide . . . When the Party had internal trouble Stalin's bullies settled all problems by cracking skulls or with the rifle.

One of his secret passions is writing poetry. The verses invariably are in praise of communism . . . His self-esteem is boundless . . . He edits history books to make sure he is mentioned with the proper number of superlatives . . . There are at least five Russian cities named for him and countless parks, factories and railroads . . . Monuments of the dictator are a ruble-a-dozen . . . He is generally credited with having a sense of humor—but his wit is the product of his writers as part of The Great Man buildup . . . His power is absolute. It even supersedes that of drama critics . . . Several years ago Moscow critics gave a nyet verdict to a play he enjoyed, and poor business forced its closing . . . Stalin ordered the show to continue. And it is still running.

Even tyrants are aware that time is beyond their powers of conquest, but Stalin is making a vain attempt to ignore death's inevitability . . . The only language he speaks is Russian . . . He started studying English sometime ago, but learning the abc's proved too burdensome a mental chore, so he quit . . . His formula for revolution is based on organizing a small, tightly disciplined band of fanatics . . . The original Russian Communist Party which sparked the revolution numbered about 8000 members . . . They have enslaved over 180 million people and control 600 million more.

The efficacy of his twofaced political policy is proved by the way it has deluded and confused leaders of other nations . . . In 1948 President Truman believed that Stalin was "a good fellow who would make and keep certain agreements" . . . His biography is a record of countless crimes . . . After the 5-year plan was in effect he terrorized a hundred million peasants into submission and permitted more than 3 million to starve to death . . . Entire populations which objected to his policies were exiled to Siberia . . . If he will deal that ruthlessly with his own people, it is sheer idiocy to hope he will show mercy elsewhere.

Stalin has said that he has no friends. It is simple to understand why . . . The majority of the original group of leaders, who rose to power with him, are dead. Purged by his order . . . Commissar of War Frunze was the victim of Stalin's most grisly murder plot in 1925. He forced Frunze to undergo an operation, although the commissar's doctors opposed the surgery. Frunze died on the table.

Stalin was one of the founders of his leading newspaper, Pravda . . . He occasionally contributes an editorial—unsigned . . . Kremlin archives contain one of his prized possessions—dossiers on every member of the Politburo. These files are amazingly complete. They include verbatim records of private conversations as well as sexual activities . . . This evidence serves as a potent blackmail weapon and strengthens Stalin's divide-and-rule policy within Russia's inner circle . . . Hitler copied it from him . . . He was originally a Menshivik—a revolutionary splinter party that opposed the Bolsheviks. This fact, of course, is never mentioned by his official biographers.

The biggest lie of his mendacious career is the legend that Lenin chose him as his successor. The truth is that Lenin disowned Stalin both personally and politically before he died . . . Intelligence records reveal that Lenin planned stripping Stalin of his power when death intervened. Stalin cunningly thefted Lenin's immense prestige in Russia by adopting his ideas and posing as his ideological heir . . . He has never stopped using Lenin's popularity with Russians as his propaganda crutch . . . Their photos are always displayed side by side.

He knows that the Atlantic High Command now concedes the strategic situation in Europe is almost as bad as the military one in Korea and that Russia could blitz to the Channel in two months . . . He knows that six Russian field armies are manning the Iron Curtain and that there are only 20 Allied Divisions from the Mediterranean to the Arctic . . . His Nazi experts have assured him that he could neutralize Great Britain with rockets.

Stalin neglected to communicate with his mother for over 10 years. After snatching power he held a short reunion with her—just long enough to get a propaganda photo . . . He has declared often that poverty and despotism drove him to revolution. But his regime has been more tyrannical than 500 years of the Czarism he claims to detest . . . His reputation for personal valor was badly battered in 1934 when a Communist leader was assassinated in Moscow . . . Stalin was so jittery he refused to leave the Kremlin for months. When the assassin was caught Stalin's panicky rage reached its peak. He ordered reprisals against 174 friends and kin of the killer. All were shot.

ACTH Works New Wonder, In Burn Case

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 4.—A new wonder use of the anti-arthritis drug ACTH—to save life, suffering and scarring of severly burned patients — was disclosed here tonight.

The wholly unexpected benefits were uncovered dramatically, in the virtually pain-free recovery of an Arizona man who suffered severe burns to more than 70 per cent of his body.

The patient, T. C. Gains, son of a rancher near Parker, Arizona, is scheduled to present himself for inspection this week to physicians attending the Fourth Clinical Session of the America: Medical Association, which opens here today.

Not only the patient's survival, where medical experience shows that practically all persons with more than half of their skin burned away die, but other aspects of the case have aroused medical attention. They include, his doctors said:

1. The unprecedented success of permanent skin grafting from donors, where heretofore such grafts have provided only temporary covering.

2. The fact that despite the deep and extensive burns the patient suffered no crippling from scar tissue, usual aftermath in such burns.

3. The patient's wounds remained clear of infection, and did not ooze blood serum. Such loss of body fluid is a chief hazard to recovery of burn victims.

Physicians who handled the case also claimed the patient escaped acute body poisoning, severe shock and complete prostration that occur with burn cases. The day after the victim collapsed at a hospital threshold, he appeared comfortable, smoked cigarettes and joked with his doctors, they said.

In the words of one physician who attended him: "He became a normal man—only without much skin."

Gains was admittedly hard to kill, according to the details of the tragedy. On May 19, he was showing a neighbor how to use a tractor when a cigarette touched off its gasoline supply.

Gains' whole torso from the waist up was severely burned. Also burned were his buttocks, his right leg and both hands. Less severe burns were inflicted on his left leg, arms, face and neck.

No one else knew how to drive his truck, so the victim himself took the wheel for the 40-mile drive to the Colorado River Indian Hospital, at Parker, Ariz. It was there that he collapsed, at the hospital door.

Doctors who saw the extent of his injuries—including a relative of the victim—saw no hope of saving him, they said. Nevertheless, they began the usual extensive treatment, plasma to control shock and replace fluid loss, pencillin to prevent infection, morphine and demerol to deaden pain. Vaseline gauze pressure dressings were applied.

The next day, the patient sinking, it was decided to fly him to Santa Monica's Hospital, in Phoenix, 150 miles away. He reached there 24 hours after the accident.

It was there that Dr. M. James Whitelaw, of Phoenix, admittedly in face of the apparent hopelessness of the case, decided to try Acthar, the Armour Laboratories' brand name for their ACTH. The patient's dressings and other medication were stopped.

Dr. Whitelaw reported that the response was quick and dramatic. Pain and restlessness practically disappeared, and the patient became comfortable. By the fifth day, it was deemed safe to remove the original dressings; the extent of the burns was then officially recorded as 71 percent, and color pictures were taken.

Some 5000 physicians from all parts of United States, and an equal number of guests, are expected to register at the four-day scientific assembly of the AMA, before its end, on Friday. The meetings, designed primarily for the family doctor, are held midway between the larger, more formal, annual meetings of the AMA.

Ice 'Bombing' Believed Frozen Plane Waste

LONDON, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Aviation experts said today that the big blocks of ice that have been bombarding Britain "mysteriously" for the past few weeks probably were frozen waste from washrooms of airplanes.

Two of the chunks were found to contain scented soap and kitchen waste.

The V Neck Issues White Paper on Men

By John Crosby

Crosby

MAGGI McNELLIS, one of the regular V necks on "Leave It to the Girls," has issued a White Paper on men. "No truer words were ever dashed off than 'The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.' And none more preposterous than 'It's a man's world.' Men may strut and bounce importantly about the stage—but it's women who pull the strings that make them operate . . . For as every woman knows, men are limp and lifeless puppets without the girls to pull the strings."

Up to a late hour last night, this was the final communique from the headquarters of the babes—uh—women, according to the limp and lifeless puppet around here who handles official pronouncements of this kind. Of course, his strings aren't as well handled as some puppets I know, so you can't be sure that's the final word from on high or not.

MY OWN STRINGS have been operated by a succession of females of one sort or another, not all of them adroit puppeteers. The girl handling the strings which landed me into this job, for example. Clear case of drunken driving. Ever since, I've been doomed to look at television, including Maggi McNellis, Eloise McElhone, Robin Chandler and the rest of the string-pullers on "Leave It to the Girls."

The other day, a young man, who for some unaccountable reason is writing a magazine piece about me, asked me if there was a single suggestion I'd ever advanced which had actually been adopted by the industry since I took over this job. So far as I know, there is only one. I once suggested that Eloise McElhone trim down a bit if she planned to stay in big league TV. She went on a diet the next day. (Told me so herself.) That's one string I pulled all by myself, McNellis.

THERE ARE a lot of girls around TV these days, pulling strings in all directions. One of them is Betty Furness, who also pulls open refrigerator doors on "Studio One." On another, fairly new show, "Penthouse Party," Miss Furness manipulates real, live men and women.

"Penthouse Party," which is on ABC-TV (WMAL) at 10 p. m. on Fridays, is a fairly significant enterprise because, some instinct tells me, we are in for a flood of similar programs. It is set in a mood of formalized informality, stressing what appears to my skeptical eye to be the rehearsed ad lib.

We are confronted first with a front door which is shortly opened by Miss Furness, who invites us all, each and every one of us, into her party. Inside we find a host of merrymakers, dancing, playing the piano, singing, drinking, eating. We are introduced to each one of them—Edward Everett Horton, Buddy Weed, John Carradine, and the rest. Miss Furness then entreats us to sit down and is altogether so overwhelmingly hospitable I expect her to shoot Scotch in my mouth right through the screen.

I don't know how this sort of thing strikes you. Frankly, it makes me very nervous; I feel somehow that I've wandered into the wrong party and they're just being nice about it.

At the end of the half-hour, Miss Furness seems genuinely sorry to see us go, escorts us to the door and invites us back next week. Don't think I can make it. I'm going to be over on Third Avenue with the boys next week, Miss Furness, but thanks anyway.

His Wife Is Heartily in Favor of the Change

A friend of mine has been forced to open a bank account. He went on the wagon and had to find a new place to cash his paycheck.

NO WILLPOWER, EH?

When The Washington Post moved into its shiny new building, staffers got the usual memo asking for exemplary behavior calculated to keep the premises in good condition. (All wastepaper now goes into wastebaskets instead of on the floor, ashes go into ashtrays, and we're even getting a snack bar to keep food out of the city room.)

Impressed with the sparkling newness of our surroundings, we've been on our good behavior.

But the other night, it looked like we had a backslider in our midst. Of all people, it was the mildest, best-mannered man on the staff.

Just off the city room, there's a little cubicle which will soon be used as our wirephoto room. But at present it's unoccupied, and our suspect was observed making frequent trips inside.

On emerging, he'd invariably wipe his mouth with a handkerchief and return to his desk with the satisfied glow of a man who has just downed a robust slug of drinking whisky. We could hardly believe our eyes.

"Lookit," whispered one reporter as our man headed for the unused room again. "He must have a bottle hidden in there."

"Let's go see," replied a colleague. They tiptoed in, and caught the guy red-handed—arm raised, mouth open.

The culprit flushed and stammered: "I know I shouldn't have brought it into the city room, but I'm just crazy about this orange chiffon cake. Have a slice?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Large box of scrap material for quilts." (Warfield 1022.)

"Housebroken 6-week-old part-Siamese kittens, trained to obey." (Columbia 2495.)

"Adorable, frivolous, frisky 10-week-old puppies." (Sligo 1302.)

MISCELLANY

Reminder for families with fighting men in Korea: It's possible to send not only letters but packages by Air Mail . . . Pop Grey's poetic tribute to the late Carter Barron is a fine piece of writing. Too bad it's too long to reprint here . . . District Liners Pete and Harriet Doyle were in Cleveland when the big snowstorm hit. "Ohio is great," they postcard, "but we'll take those mild Washington winters any old day" . . . Mrs. C. J. Lauer of 3919 Nicholson st., Hyattsville, Md., says you're all invited to attend the bazaar being given by the Mothers and Teachers Club of the Hyattsville Elementary Schools tonight at 8, in the auditorium of the Forty-third Avenue School. Mrs. Mildred Hartung is in charge of arrangements . . . Mrs. John B. Diamond of 115 Upton st., Rockville, Md., says you can get in the proper mood for the Hyattsville bazaar by stopping first at the Book Fair sponsored by the Rockville Elementary School PTA from 3:30 to 7 p. m. today in the cafeteria of the Richard Montgomery High School . . . Yesterday was LeBaron Coakley's forty-ninth birthday, and he celebrated with his first cartoon in moons for this space, after a lengthy illness . . . Mrs. Jeanne White of 2720 73d pl. Hyattsville, Md., president of the Kent Village Cooperative Nursery School, tells me that the children in the school would sure like to have Santa bring them a used piano that some kind District Liner doesn't need any more. Mrs. White's phone number is Appleton 3950 . . . Afterthought on that postcard from the Doyles: The snow plow that dug Cleveland out from under its blanket of white is owned by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir, Va. The plow had been shipped to a Cleveland plant for some repair work, and was already on the scene when the big blow struck . . . Bit by bit, my photograph is appearing in books and magazines. In "Washington Fricassee," a book of local photographs just released, you'll find my left ear and sleeve on Page 19, just behind Bob Hope. I had just finished interviewing Hope, an NBC star, for WTOP, a CBS station. The comedian was hopping off for Germany with Veep Barkley and others, and said he'd airmail a recorded program back to NBC in time for his regular broadcast. "What if the record is delayed, and doesn't arrive by air time?" I asked. Bob grinned: "In that event, get set for a tap dance by Niles Trammell." Trammell at that time was only president of NBC.

A-Bomb Remark Shocks British

By Drew Pearson

It was partly a fluke that led to the Attlee-Truman conversation—one of the most important conferences since Potsdam. Regardless of the accidental inception, however, diplomats agree that the conversation has long been needed to bring greater synchronization of traditional British-American friendship.

Pearson

The fluke was the President's off-the-cuff statement that we were considering dropping the atomic bomb and the inference that General MacArthur had been given a free hand as to when we should drop it.

This statement, made at a morning White House press conference, hit the British House of Commons late in the afternoon and left British Labor leaders gasping. They have had increasing misgivings about MacArthur, and were fully aware of the manner in which he had maneuvered around State Department proposals to keep U. N. armies away from the Chinese dams and the Manchurian border.

British Labor leaders did not then know that the President had made his atom-bomb statement in reply to oral newspaper queries and that it was not a carefully considered statement. Finally they did not know that the President was in the process of issuing a clarifying statement — which came three hours later.

British Labor Rebels

By accident, it happened that the Truman A-bomb statement hit the House of Commons during a major foreign policy debate, with 63 Labor members led by Tom Driberg and Ian Mikardo, of Labor's national executive body, proposing high-level conferences between the East and West before taking any further decisions on Korea.

Simultaneously came a speech by Anthony Eden demanding conferences between London and Washington, plus a London Daily Mail editorial goading Attlee with the taunt that Churchill would have been halfway across the Atlantic were he Prime Minister.

It was in this atmosphere of extreme criticism from both Conservatives and Labor that Prime Minister Attlee was shown the first Truman statement indicating that the dropping of the A-bomb was up to MacArthur. At this, about 100 Conservative members of Parliament left the chamber and signed a petition to Churchill stating that if the United States dropped the bomb, Britain should pull out of Korea.

Coffee and Defense

It may seem a long way between a coffee investigation staged by a Senator from Iowa and this country's preparedness for war; yet there's a connection just the same.

The Senate investigation, staged by silver-crusted, likable Guy Gillette of Iowa, delved into increased coffee prices and speculation. Insofar as it dealt with coffee manipulation by the big chain grocery stores and the New York Commodity Market, the probe was justified. However, when it blamed Latin-American coffee growers for price increases, it was like blaming Iowa corn farmers for the increased price of corn.

Thus the injustice of Gillette's probe, which made headlines in Latin America, was the biggest break the Communists ever had south of the Rio Grande. It also turned millions of hitherto friendly Latinos very sour indeed. Because Latin American coffee growers, like the farmer of Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, had suffered extremely lean years prior to the war. And the chief reason for increased coffee prices was identical with the reason for the increased price of American meat, corn, wheat and cotton—namely, that the world was consuming more.

Anyway, the State Department, aghast at the harm done our good neighbor policy by the Gillette coffee probe, placed all the facts before the Senate committee. Forthright Assistant Secretary Edward Miller warned that Gillette was playing into Communist hands, while far-sighted Senaor Clinton Anderson of New Mexico did his best to put the quietus on his colleague from Iowa.

We Need Latin America

But Gillette was stubborn. He had the support of "Cotton Elmer" Thomas of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and he stood pat. What Gillette didn't figure on, however, was that Washington Merry-Go-Round exposures of Thomas' speculation in cotton, lard and eggs would defeat him at the polls.

Now that Thomas has been defeated, Senator Gillette is without a friendly committee chairman, and new Chairman Ellender of Louisiana plans to abolish the coffee-probe committee.

However, here is the unpleasant payoff. The effect of the furor Gillette stirred up in Latin America is now coming back to slap us in the face, following the bad news from Korea and Indo-China.

Desperately short of manganese, we have turned to Brazil, which has the biggest manganese deposits in the Americas. But Brazil also happens to be the biggest coffee grower and is still smarting from the unfair accusations of the Gillette committee. Though she is now helping us out on manganese, it is not with the same enthusiasm as in the last war.

Meanwhile, manganese is getting so short that refrigerators, automobiles, other civilian products are almost certain to be curtailed because of dwindling steel.

Other strategic materials are also involved — materials which Latin America has and which we are going to need vitally in case of all-out war. All of which is why the American people — instead of throwing brickbats, as did Senator Gillette — need to get back to working at the good neighbor policy.
